'No energy bill before January'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With congressional leaders saying they can produce no energy bill before January, House-Senate conferees debating the matter recessed their public session after an hour Monday in favor of closed-door bargaining.

Each side blamed the other for the deadlock, which has prevented completion of a crucial aspect of the five-part energy program — whether to continue federal controls on natural gas prices.

"We are ready to talk. We are ready to negotiate. We had no cooperation at all from the other side," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said. "We spent the weekend in great anticipation of propositions coming from the House. There are none."

But Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., the conference chairman, looked at the Senate conferees on his left and said, "The problem lies right over here to my left."

THE MAIN DISPUTE at issue is how long and at what level price controls should stay in effect, and whether the uncontrolled market — where gas is sold in the same state it is produced — should remain free.

Despite the deadlock, House Energy Committee chairman Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, said the House leadership will continue attempts to complete all five parts of the energy package before taking a floor vote on any of them.

Because of all the problems, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd both said over the weekend that Congress will not complete work on the energy package before January.

CONFEREES HAVE completed essential work — but not the final vote — on three parts of the energy bill: energy conservation initiatives, industrial conversion to coal and changes in utilities' rate procedures. The natural gas and energy tax aspects of the program still are undecided.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., said the negotiations remind him of his sister-in-law's outlook on tradeoffs: "What's hers is hers and what's mine is open to negotiation."

Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, said if the deadlock ends in failure to enact a bill this year, "it could make us a laughing stock."

President Carter is concerned that the stalemate will stymie other proposals, but rather would see the matter delayed than get a meaningless bill.

Rex Granum, deputy press secretary, said Carter "is increasingly concerned about reaching some sort of an agreement on the bill," but does not advocate quick action if it would mean a bad bill.

"Rather than us simply going and accepting a bill, just to say that we've gotten a bill this year, his preference would be to wait and get a good and equitable energy bill," Granum said.

"The failure to have some sort of agreement on the major aspects of the energy plan will have some serious consequences. The president is increasingly concerned about the possibility."

Granum said if no agreement is reached, the administration will have more difficulty composing economic policy in general and its tax reform package in particular.

Track up to par, panel told

Arlington Heights administrators Monday told a local committee investigating living conditions on the backstretch at the Arlington Park Race Track that crime is down and all housing safety and fire codes have been met.

The committee was created last month by the village board after The Daily Herald disclosed substandard conditions in the backstretch where track workers live.

After listening for two hours to reports from village fire, health and police departments, Joseph Joyce, president of Arlington-Washington Park Race Tracks Corp., said, "We're now and have always been in compliance with applicable building codes.

"I DON'T KNOW of any race track that has a finer backstretch than Arlington Park and provides more recreation than we do," he said. "What was a widespread situation three or four years ago has gotten better every year."

Health Dept. inspector Dan Tarry, who monitors conditions on the backstretch, said, "The facilities are equal to anything I've seen. They meet all housing codes, are superior to migrant camps in Cook County and have more than double the space you get in the Army."

Police Chief Robert P. Derks said crime in the area was down 26 per cent this summer and fire Chief John Hayden said sprinkler systems and fire retardant lumber have made the backstretch safe.

Joyce said damaged dormitory units are caused by residents and are not the result of negligence by the track.

"IT'S A PROBLEM of enforcement," he said, "and we can't tell these people how to live."

Members of the committee are Trustee Robert Miller, Illinois Racing Board Chairman Lucy Reum, State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, housing commission member Fredric Ford and Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson. They will report to the village board by March 1.

The committee will tour the backstretch area Dec. 30 and meet again Jan. 4 with school and park district officials to discuss new programs for track employes.

"There are no easy solutions to any of this," Joyce said. "But we plan to have more of the same athletic and educational programs we've had in the past to help these people. It can't be done overnight."

RTA running over budget

The Regional Transportation Authority's massive expansion of suburban bus service is running nearly 40 per cent over budget, costing the RTA an additional $700,000 and threatening future growth.

The RTA staff Monday blamed the cost overruns on its lack of experience in dealing with such a large program.

"Admittedly, in this case we blew $1 million, but you wouldn't have what you are going to get if we hadn't," said Leo Cusick, RTA's chief operating officer.

"We had no experience and no one else had any experience in implementing the number of routes we are implementing in the region," said Cusick.

He said the agency plans to start 50 new bus routes during fiscal 1978, with many of the routes already in operation.

TO COVER THE COST overruns, the RTA will have to cut back on other types of new suburban service promised to D. Daniel Baldino, suburban board member, when he cast the deciding vote in favor of the RTA's new 5 per cent gasoline tax.

Baldino said he is unhappy the new suburban service program will be cut, but said the agency must finance the cost overruns "for the sake of not having egg on our faces."

Cusick told board members the RTA suburban program is a pioneering effort. "There is no place in the United States which is trying to do what you gentlemen are trying to do," he said.

He said, however, the number of new routes made it impossible to do accurate planning and cost projections before the routes went into effect.

Cusick said that kind of careful planning would have cut new service by 85 to 90 per cent. "My idea was to get out there and then straighten it out," Cusick said, noting he was pressured by board members to start new suburban services as quickly as possible.

SEVERAL BOARD members chastised Cusick and the staff for allowing the cost overruns and for not notifying the board earlier.

"You have added 50 per cent to the cost," said board member Patrick O'Mailey of Chicago.

Nicholas Bosen, another Chicago board member, said he wanted a slow-down in the suburban bus program. "I would prefer to slow down so that we can get a better handle on the costs," he said.

L. Michael Fultz, director of the RTA's internal affairs division, said there were three major reasons for the cost overruns.

First, he said, the staff found several opportunties for expanded service in implementing the planned service. "They have put in more service than the original program indicated," he said, noting this accounted for 40 per cent of the overruns.

ANOTHER 40 PER CENT is attributable to bad estimates, Fultz said. Finally, he said, 20 per cent is attributable to a new method of costing bus service.

Routes with cost overruns include the North Suburban Mass Transit District route 209 between Des Plaines and Woodfield Mall. The $27,000 cost overrun on this route results from overtime pay on Saturdays required by NORTRAN's labor contract, with the new costing method a contributing factor.

Bad estimates are responsible for cost overruns anticipated on two new routes, including a route from Arlington Heights to Harper College and a commuter feeder service to the train station in the Streamwood-Hanover Park area.

RTA director Richard Newland of Waukegan said he was not happy with the cost overruns, but said the agency could not afford any delays in the start of expanded suburban service. Noting that the agency has just started to collect a 5 per cent gasoline tax, Newland reminded the board that money collected in the suburbs must be spent in the suburbs.

"It has been my opinion that in some areas of suburbia that money can't be spent," he said, noting that some areas have no transit service.

Spy scandal rocks W. Germany

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The West German government said Monday that three spies had given top military secrets, including NATO's first-line defense plans, to the Communists in an espionage scandal far more serious than the one that toppled former Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Ministry of Defense spokesman Capt. Kurt Fischer told reporters the trio revealed top secret information on West Germany's armed forces strategy as well as NATO's overall defense plans.

The three involved are a former secretary in the ministry of defense, her husband, and a former employe of the naval staff.

All three were arrested last year during a nationwide investigation of spy rings, but the extent of their espionage activities was not disclosed until the newspaper Frankfurter Allgemeine broke the story Monday.

According to West German counter-intelligence sources, the trio had access to more than 1,000 documents, a number of them labeled "top secret."

The sources said the three handed to the Communists photostats of the armed force's crisis and alarm operational plans, a catalogue of measures to be taken in the event of an attack, and documents on staff and structural planning.

Security sources said the trio also had access to top secret NATO documents on logistics of the alliance, such as ordinances on fuel supply in the case of an emergency, pipeline systems, plus general military regulations and documents about armaments.

"THIS IS A VERY serious affair in which state secrets were betrayed," Federal Prosecutor General Kurt Rebmann told a television interviewer. "The case has caused more damage in the military field than the Guillaume affair."

The arrest of Guenther Guillaume, a convicted East German spy and former aide to Chancellor Brandt, led to Brandt's resignation in 1974.

The Federal Prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe said it planned to bring formal espionage charges against the secretary, Renate Lutze, her husband Lothar-Erwin Lutze, who also held a job in the Ministry of Defense, and former naval staff employe Juergen Wiegel.

Frankfurter Allgemeine said the trio apparently also passed data collected by West Germany on the Warsaw Pact forces, their equipment, troop strength and other military details to the East Germans.

Early retirement plans approved by top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a blow to older Americans, the Supreme Court ruled Monday that companies may force workers to retire before age 65 under pension plans drafted before Congress outlawed age discrimination in 1967.

The justices reversed 7-2 a U.S. appeals court ruling that an employer must show "some economic or business purpose" for pushing a worker into early retirement.

They said an employe such as Harris McMann of Fairfax, Va., may be required to retire at age 60 if he belongs to a pension plan providing for that and which was put into effect in "good faith" before passage of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

Millions of Americans could be affected by the ruling, but its impact is likely to be eased by legislation pending in Congress which would close the loophole for pension plans predating the 1967 law.

LAUREN SELDEN of the American Assn. of Retired Persons said Monday's decision was "an awful opinion." But he said a bill now in House-Senate conference is expected to raise from 65 to 70 the age at which mandatory retirement is allowed and "make crystal clear that no plan can be bona fide if it requires pre-70 man-

Thin and ornery, but dog travels 650 miles home

SOUTH ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — Jack Millikan last saw his Irish setter, Jesse, just before he blacked out after an auto accident on I-80 near Lincoln, Neb., six months ago. But the loyal pet sniffed and roamed some 650 miles and finally found its way home.

"I knew she'd come back," Millikan said. "I kept telling everybody but nobody believed me. All the time I kept saying, 'Jesse's going to come back. If nobody catches her, she'll come back.' "

Jesse had no address tag on her collar and she had never been anywhere near Nebraska. She found Millikan at his parents' house, where he had moved only a few months before they parted in Nebraska.

MILLIKAN SAID he thinks she may have smelled the way to her South Elgin home.

"That's what I think," he said. "I had a feeling she knew where she was the whole time because, every once in a while, the dog would look at me with a kind of look on its face: 'Oh, we're almost there,' or "We're going to stop again.' "

Millikan, 23, a bachelor, was on his way to Colorado with Jesse six months ago. He pulled off the interstate in Nebraska to take a rest, but when he pulled back on the highway he was stopped by police. The police told him he had been in an accident, was swerving all over the highway and was apparently suffering from sunstroke.

Witnesses to the accident said they saw the dog limping away toward the North Platte River.

Millikan said a very thin, dirty Jesse returned home. Her temperament was similar to a junkyard dog, but now, after a week, she's wagging her tail a lot and enjoying her home and owner once again.

Martin-Trigona's auto taken from front of home

A new car owned by Senate candidate Anthony R. Martin-Trigona has been stolen in Chicago, Martin-Trigona said Monday.

The car is the third politically connected vehicle stolen in the Chicago area in the past year.

Martin-Trigona said the 1978 Chevrolet Impala "with everything" was taken from the street in front of his Lake Shore Drive residence. He said he usually parks the car in a rented parking space and keeps a van on the street. But he decided Sunday night to switch parking arrangements, he said.

Police said the car apparently was taken between 3:30 and 7:30 a.m.

A station wagon containing records of the Airline Canteen Co. was the last politically connected car theft. That vehicle disappeared from a restaurant parking lot just before the owners of Airline Canteen were to turn the records over to investigators.

The car has been found — minus the records. No one has been arrested in that theft.

A year ago, an Oldsmobile on loan to then governor-elect James R. Thompson was taken from a parking place near Thompson's North Side home. That car was found a few days later, minus its telephone but otherwise in good condition.

A new car owned by Senate candidate Anthony R. Martin-Trigona has been stolen in Chicago, Martin-Trigona said Monday.

The car is the third politically connected vehicle stolen in the Chicago area in the past year.

Martin-Trigona said the 1978 Chevrolet Impala "with everything" was taken from the street in front of his Lake Shore Drive residence. He said he usually parks the car in a rented parking space and keeps a van on the street. But he decided Sunday night to switch parking arrangements, he said.

Police said the car apparently was taken between 3:30 and 7:30 a.m.

Thin and ornery, but dog travels 650 miles home

SOUTH ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — Jack Millikan last saw his Irish setter, Jesse, just before he blacked out after an auto accident on I-80 near Lincoln, Neb., six months ago. But the loyal pet sniffed and roamed some 650 miles and finally found its way home.

"I knew she'd come back," Millikan said. "I kept telling everybody but nobody believed me. All the time I kept saying, 'Jesse's going to come back. If nobody catches her, she'll come back.' "

Jesse had no address tag on her collar and she had never been anywhere near Nebraska. She found Millikan at his parents' house, where he had moved only a few months before they parted in Nebraska.

MILLIKAN SAID he thinks she may have smelled the way to her South Elgin home.

"That's what I think," he said. "I had a feeling she knew where she was the whole time because, every once in a while, the dog would look at me with a kind of look on its face: 'Oh, we're almost there,' or "We're going to stop again.' "

Millikan, 23, a bachelor, was on his way to Colorado with Jesse six months ago. He pulled off the interstate in Nebraska to take a rest, but when he pulled back on the highway he was stopped by police. The police told him he had been in an accident, was swerving all over the highway and was apparently suffering from sunstroke.

Witnesses to the accident said they saw the dog limping away toward the North Platte River.

Millikan said a very thin, dirty Jesse returned home. Her temperament was similar to a junkyard dog, but now, after a week, she's wagging her tail a lot and enjoying her home and owner once again.

Churchill's wife dies of heart attack

LONDON (UPI) — Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, the woman Sir Winston Churchill married in 1908 and lived with "happily ever afterwards," died of a heart attack Monday in her London home at the age of 92.

"My Clem" or "Clemmie," as he called her, stood by Churchill for 56 epic years in what he called "the most successfuly marriage of the century." She was a beloved companion who gave stability to his genius.

Her grandson, Winston Churchill, a member of parliament, said she was stricken while having lunch with her secretary and died shortly afterwards.

"Baroness Spencer-Churchill died peacefully today at her London home following a heart attack," young Churchill said. "The funeral service will be private. A memorial service will be held in the New Year."

SHE WILL BE buried alongside her husband at Bladon, near Oxford, adjoining the family Seat of the Dukes of Marlborough and Sir Winston's birthplace, now a major tourist attraction.

Lady Churchill, granted a life peerage by Queen Elizabeth II in 1965, was born April 1, 1885 and married Churchill at the age of 23. She had been in frail health for the past few years following the death of Sir Winston on Jan. 24, 1965 at the age of 90.

In recent years she suffered from fatigue and family tragedies, including the suicide of her daughter Diana in 1963 and the death of son Randolph in 1968. And she never recovered fully from the death of her husband.

Beautiful, silver-haired, maturely graceful and serene in her later years, she spent a lifetime married to a man who became a living legend, a man so mercurial her life never was easy, in public or private.

Churchill summarized their married life in the last eight words of his first autobiography: "Then I married and lived happily ever afterwards."

IN ANOTHER tribute he once wrote, "My marriage was the most fortunate and joyous event which happened to me in the whole of my life, for what can be more glorious than to be united in one's walk through life with a being incapable of an ignoble thought?"

Last Feb. 22, with a state pension of only $28 a week and her money running out, Lady Churchill declined all offers of financial aid and sold five of Sir Winston's paintings and some heirlooms because she needed money.

Although parliament offered help she said, "I greatly deplore any idea that either special legislation or an appeal should be initiated."

London dealers paid a total of $146,700, setting three world auction room records with prices that were as much a reflection of the country's love and admiration of her as they were for the artistic merits of the paintings.

She was born Clementine Hozier and married Churchill in September 1908 at fashionable St. Margaret's, Westminster. He was 10 years her senior.

THE GREAT wartime leader rose to dominate his age, Clemmie grew to take a place alongside him in the hearts of her countrymen and men and women everywhere. As the world knew "Winnie," it knew "Clemmie."

In private she was the person to whom the great man turned for creature comforts — she made sure the sandwiches were made with paper thin bread, the champagne vintage and abundant. She was there in those moments when even a Churchill needed solace.

He wept in her arms when British voters denied him the prime ministership in 1945 after he had led England through the dark days of the war.

Years later Churchill delighted in telling friends how she patted his head, dried his tears and said, "Winston, it may well be a blessing in disguise."

Clemmie became almost as well known and as loved to Englishmen as the British queens themselves — from Victoria through Elizabeth — and all knew the woman who stood behind the man offered Britain in its darkest moment the inspiration for its finest hour.

HER SECRET was to inject a sense of normalcy into Sir Winston's hectic life. She ran their homes with smooth efficiency, giving him a haven in which he could noticeably unwind.

The philosophy behind her success was simple: she never tried to dominate Churchill, but handled him as no other person ever could. He worshipped and respected her.

"It would not be possible for any public man to go through what I have gone through without the assistance of what we in England call one's better half," Churchill told a Strasbourg crowd shortly after World War II.

"If I die first," Lady Churchill once told former Prime Minister Lloyd George, "the most important thing I can say in my will would be how to look after Winston." And with her usual humor and insight, she added: "The most important thing would be to feed him well."

CLEMMIE'S CONSIDERATION and patience balanced her husband's frequent impatience, her outward calm made up for his unpredictability. She gave stability to his genius.

Lady Churchill could have made a distinguished mark in her own right. She was an accomplished public speaker and dignified without being haughty. "She looks like a grande dame without speaking like one," a wounded Grenadier guardsman said of her during World War II.

Traditional Santa Lucia to reign

As legend goes, a generous young maiden was burned at the stake in Sicily on this day in 304 A.D.

Her crime was to give away her dowry to the poor in her village and to admit she had become a Christian. The townspeople called her a witch.

Years later, her spirit rescued the peasants in the Swedish province of Varmland from starvation by bringing them food and drink. She was seen crossing a lake there in a white gown with a crown of light encircling her head.

Ever since that time, the Swedes have celebrated Dec. 13 as Lucia Day — the first day of their Christmas season.

THE LUTHERAN Church of the Good Shepherd, 1111 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights, celebrated Lucia Day in the traditional manner this week.

A young woman, active in community and church affairs, was chosen as the Lucia or Queen of Lights to reign over the festivities that began Sunday.

This year it was Karen Johnson, 16, 412 Stillwell Dr., Buffalo Grove. She was crowned with candles and dressed in a white robe at Sunday's service. The story of Lucia also was told and songs were sung.

Miss Johnson and her court of three other women from the congregation today will visit several area nursing homes, just as legend says Lucia visits the sick and elderly on her feast day.

Special session to cost $20,000

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois taxpayers will pay $20,000 for a special session of the Illinois General Assembly Friday that is likely to last half a day and accomplish little.

Illinois Senate Pres. Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, and House Speaker William Redmond, D-Bensenville, who is in California this week, called the session to act on Gov. James R. Thompson's amendatory veto of legislation passed last month creating an expanded elections board.

The dispute arose when the Illinois Supreme Court ruled last year that the appointment process for the board was unconstitutional and ordered the legislature to approve new procedures.

The legislature's latest effort created an eight-member board, but gave appointment power to the highest elected state wide official of the party opposite the governor.

HOWEVER, the governor rejected that provision and used his amendatory veto power to give himself the power to name all eight members, with approval of the Senate.

Since then, the Democrat-controlled legislature, Thompson and fellow Republicans have worked to avoid giving each other an edge in deciding the composition of the board, created by the 1970 state constitution to oversee the operation of all statewide elections.

The board also regulates the state's campaign disclosure laws and has the power to investigate violations of that act.

It is the investigatory powers granted by the Elections Board Act that have resulted in bitter arguments in the legislature over the size, operation and political and geographical balance of the board.

The controversy over the size and operation of the board has caused the Illinois Supreme Court to extend its deadline for action five times.

THE LEGISLATURE was expected to act on the veto Jan. 11 when it returns for a one-day session, but the Democrat leaders called the special session saying there might not be enough time to meet the high court's latest Jan. 13 deadline.

The hastily called session is likely to produce a legislative stalemate and could result in the death of the bill passed last month.

Either an override of the governor's veto or acceptance of his changes will require the majorities of 107 votes in the House and 36 in the Senate according to the state constitution.

Observers say they do not believe either side will be able to muster the necessary support, thus killing the bill and probably forcing the legislature to return here shortly after Jan. 1 in an effort to meet the court deadline.

THE LATEST controversy over the board started several years ago when former Gov. Daniel Walker attempted to fire Franklin Lunding as chairman.

An aide for Thompson, who is in England, said the governor does not plan to cut his current trip short and return to the state.

Thompson will not return to Illinois until Dec. 22. He has told Deputy Gov. James Fletcher to monitor the activities of the legislature and keep informed of developments.

Aides said Thompson had no comment on the action by the Democrats. The governor's staff is not expected to compromise on the issue of the chief executive's appointment powers.

Marshall Field counters takeover bid with lawsuit

by JOHN N. FRANK

A New York-based company wants to buy Marshall Field & Co., but the Chicago retailer has filed suit in federal court to stop the takeover.

Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc., which operates 71 department stores in California and the Southwest as was as prestige stores such as Neiman-Marcus Co. of Dallas and Bergdorf Goodman of New York City, is offering either stock or cash at the rate of $36 a share for Field's common stock.

Field's stock Monday closed at $22.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. The firm's annual report does not list who the majority stock holders of the company are.

STANDARD & POORS reports that 27 per cent of the company's stock is held by institutions.

If successful, the purchase would be one of the largest department store acquisitions in history.

But Field Pres. Angelo R. Arena Monday said attorneys have advised him such a purchase would violate U.S. antitrust laws. So Field filed suit in U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois alleging the acquisition would violate antitrust laws.

R.M. Hawley, president of Carter Hawley Hale, offered to exchange either stock or cash at the rate of $36 a share for Marshall Field's common stock.

However, Carter Hawley Hale would pay cash for not more than 49 per cent of Field's 9.05 million shares of common stock, a total of about $326 million.

FIELD OFFICIALS would offer no further comment on the possible acquisition, except to acknowledge receipt of a letter from Carter Hawley Hale proposing a merger based on the $36 a share offer.

Carter Hawley Hale officials in New York City were unavailable for comment.

Marshall Field & Co. had sales of $281.92 million in the six months ending July 31, up from $268.65 million a year earlier and earnings of $1.64 million or 18 cents a share, up from $1.53 million or 17 cents a share a year earlier.

Carter Hawley Hale has annual sales in the $1.5 billion range and earned $1.97 a share in its most recent fiscal year.

Among other prestigious stores, it owns the Broadway store chain on the West Coast and the Holt, Renfrew group in Canada.

Lady Harlech, now in London following a tour to promote the book, said she had written recipes down over the years for her personal use but had not noted their source. When she did her book, Lady Harlech said she simply forgot where she obtained the recipes. Atheneum, who published the book back in September, reported sales had improved since the revelation and noted that in the third printing now under way, Gourmet magazine will be credited for their recipes.

Gun, credentials taken from deputy in shooting

by TOM VALEO

The Cook County Sheriff's Dept. Monday confiscated the gun and credentials of a deputy who allegedly fired a shot Saturday night while off-duty at a car containing an Elk Grove Village family.

Frank Caliendo, 27, of 1728 N. 17th Ave., Melrose Park, has been charged with agrravated assault and reckless conduct in connection with the incident.

He will remain a corrections officer at the Division 2 House of Corrections at 2900 S. California, Chicago, where he guards between 200 and 400 prisoners, a Dept. of Corrections spokesman said. Corrections officers do not carry guns while on duty and do not have to be deputized.

IF CONVICTED, Caliendo would face suspension since department rules do not allow correction officers to have any criminal convictions, the spokesman said.

Phillip Hardiman, executive director of the Cook County Department of Corrections, said no disciplinary action will be taken against Caliendo, pending the outcome of the trial.

Caliendo allegedly fired the shot at a car containing John Heil, 1454 Kathleen Way, Elk Grove Village, his wife, 3-year-old son and 9-month-old daughter as it sped away from a stoplight on Thorndale Avenue near I-90 late Saturday night. The car was not hit.

Caliendo said he stopped the Heil auto because he thought the driver was falling asleep. He said Heil had been braking and changing lanes dangerously while driving west on I-90.

Heil, however, said Caliendo was using his car to harass him.

CALIENDO FOLLOWED the Heil auto off the expressway at the Thorndale exit and stopped behind him at the first stoplight, police said.

Caliendo said he got out of his car and went over to talk to Heil, to see if he could help him. Heil was abusive, Caliendo said, and the two argued. Caliendo said he tried to arrest Heil after he pushed his hand against Caliendo's face.

A fight followed, and Heil slammed his door, pinning Caliendo's right knee and shoulder in it and sped off, spinning him around and dragging him for several feet, Caliendo said. Caliendo was treated for knee and shoulder injuries at Sherman Hospital early Sunday morning.

Caliendo then drew his 45-caliber automatic pistol and fired, police said. Caliendo said he fired into the air, but an off-duty Itasca policeman who was stopped behind Caliendo at the light told Elk Grove police Caliendo leveled the gun at the Heil auto.

CALIENDO, who was injured and having difficulty breathing, got into his car and drove to the Jack in the Box restaurant at 1041 Rohlwing Rd., Elk Grove Village, identified himself as a Cook County Sheriff's Deputy and asked an employe to call the police.

LONDON (UPI) — Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, the woman Sir Winston Churchill married in 1908 and lived with "happily ever afterwards," died of a heart attack Monday in her London home at the age of 92.

"My Clem" or "Clemmie," as he called her, stood by Churchill for 56 epic years in what he called "the most successfuly marriage of the century." She was a beloved companion who gave stability to his genius.

Her grandson, Winston Churchill, a member of parliament, said she was stricken while having lunch with her secretary and died shortly afterwards.

"Baroness Spencer-Churchill died peacefully today at her London home following a heart attack," young Churchill said. "The funeral service will be private. A memorial service will be held in the New Year."

SHE WILL BE buried alongside her husband at Bladon, near Oxford, adjoining the family Seat of the Dukes of Marlborough and Sir Winston's birthplace, now a major tourist attraction.

Lady Churchill, granted a life peerage by Queen Elizabeth II in 1965, was born April 1, 1885 and married Churchill at the age of 23. She had been in frail health for the past few years following the death of Sir Winston on Jan. 24, 1965 at the age of 90.

In recent years she suffered from fatigue and family tragedies, including the suicide of her daughter Diana in 1963 and the death of son Randolph in 1968. And she never recovered fully from the death of her husband.

Beautiful, silver-haired, maturely graceful and serene in her later years, she spent a lifetime married to a man who became a living legend, a man so mercurial her life never was easy, in public or private.

Churchill summarized their married life in the last eight words of his first autobiography: "Then I married and lived happily ever afterwards."

IN ANOTHER tribute he once wrote, "My marriage was the most fortunate and joyous event which happened to me in the whole of my life, for what can be more glorious than to be united in one's walk through life with a being incapable of an ignoble thought?"

Last Feb. 22, with a state pension of only $28 a week and her money running out, Lady Churchill declined all offers of financial aid and sold five of Sir Winston's paintings and some heirlooms because she needed money.

Although parliament offered help she said, "I greatly deplore any idea that either special legislation or an appeal should be initiated."

London dealers paid a total of $146,700, setting three world auction room records with prices that were as much a reflection of the country's love and admiration of her as they were for the artistic merits of the paintings.

She was born Clementine Hozier and married Churchill in September 1908 at fashionable St. Margaret's, Westminster. He was 10 years her senior.

THE GREAT wartime leader rose to dominate his age, Clemmie grew to take a place alongside him in the hearts of her countrymen and men and women everywhere. As the world knew "Winnie," it knew "Clemmie."

In private she was the person to whom the great man turned for creature comforts — she made sure the sandwiches were made with paper thin bread, the champagne vintage and abundant. She was there in those moments when even a Churchill needed solace.

He wept in her arms when British voters denied him the prime ministership in 1945 after he had led England through the dark days of the war.

Years later Churchill delighted in telling friends how she patted his head, dried his tears and said, "Winston, it may well be a blessing in disguise."

Clemmie became almost as well known and as loved to Englishmen as the British queens themselves — from Victoria through Elizabeth — and all knew the woman who stood behind the man offered Britain in its darkest moment the inspiration for its finest hour.

HER SECRET was to inject a sense of normalcy into Sir Winston's hectic life. She ran their homes with smooth efficiency, giving him a haven in which he could noticeably unwind.

The philosophy behind her success was simple: she never tried to dominate Churchill, but handled him as no other person ever could. He worshipped and respected her.

"It would not be possible for any public man to go through what I have gone through without the assistance of what we in England call one's better half," Churchill told a Strasbourg crowd shortly after World War II.

"If I die first," Lady Churchill once told former Prime Minister Lloyd George, "the most important thing I can say in my will would be how to look after Winston." And with her usual humor and insight, she added: "The most important thing would be to feed him well."

CLEMMIE'S CONSIDERATION and patience balanced her husband's frequent impatience, her outward calm made up for his unpredictability. She gave stability to his genius.

Lady Churchill could have made a distinguished mark in her own right. She was an accomplished public speaker and dignified without being haughty. "She looks like a grande dame without speaking like one," a wounded Grenadier guardsman said of her during World War II.

As legend goes, a generous young maiden was burned at the stake in Sicily on this day in 304 A.D.

Her crime was to give away her dowry to the poor in her village and to admit she had become a Christian. The townspeople called her a witch.

Years later, her spirit rescued the peasants in the Swedish province of Varmland from starvation by bringing them food and drink. She was seen crossing a lake there in a white gown with a crown of light encircling her head.

Ever since that time, the Swedes have celebrated Dec. 13 as Lucia Day — the first day of their Christmas season.

THE LUTHERAN Church of the Good Shepherd, 1111 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights, celebrated Lucia Day in the traditional manner this week.

A young woman, active in community and church affairs, was chosen as the Lucia or Queen of Lights to reign over the festivities that began Sunday.

This year it was Karen Johnson, 16, 412 Stillwell Dr., Buffalo Grove. She was crowned with candles and dressed in a white robe at Sunday's service. The story of Lucia also was told and songs were sung.

Miss Johnson and her court of three other women from the congregation today will visit several area nursing homes, just as legend says Lucia visits the sick and elderly on her feast day.

Special session to cost $20,000

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois taxpayers will pay $20,000 for a special session of the Illinois General Assembly Friday that is likely to last half a day and accomplish little.

Illinois Senate Pres. Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, and House Speaker William Redmond, D-Bensenville, who is in California this week, called the session to act on Gov. James R. Thompson's amendatory veto of legislation passed last month creating an expanded elections board.

The dispute arose when the Illinois Supreme Court ruled last year that the appointment process for the board was unconstitutional and ordered the legislature to approve new procedures.

The legislature's latest effort created an eight-member board, but gave appointment power to the highest elected state wide official of the party opposite the governor.

HOWEVER, the governor rejected that provision and used his amendatory veto power to give himself the power to name all eight members, with approval of the Senate.

Since then, the Democrat-controlled legislature, Thompson and fellow Republicans have worked to avoid giving each other an edge in deciding the composition of the board, created by the 1970 state constitution to oversee the operation of all statewide elections.

The board also regulates the state's campaign disclosure laws and has the power to investigate violations of that act.

It is the investigatory powers granted by the Elections Board Act that have resulted in bitter arguments in the legislature over the size, operation and political and geographical balance of the board.

The controversy over the size and operation of the board has caused the Illinois Supreme Court to extend its deadline for action five times.

THE LEGISLATURE was expected to act on the veto Jan. 11 when it returns for a one-day session, but the Democrat leaders called the special session saying there might not be enough time to meet the high court's latest Jan. 13 deadline.

The hastily called session is likely to produce a legislative stalemate and could result in the death of the bill passed last month.

Either an override of the governor's veto or acceptance of his changes will require the majorities of 107 votes in the House and 36 in the Senate according to the state constitution.

Observers say they do not believe either side will be able to muster the necessary support, thus killing the bill and probably forcing the legislature to return here shortly after Jan. 1 in an effort to meet the court deadline.

THE LATEST controversy over the board started several years ago when former Gov. Daniel Walker attempted to fire Franklin Lunding as chairman.

An aide for Thompson, who is in England, said the governor does not plan to cut his current trip short and return to the state.

Thompson will not return to Illinois until Dec. 22. He has told Deputy Gov. James Fletcher to monitor the activities of the legislature and keep informed of developments.

Aides said Thompson had no comment on the action by the Democrats. The governor's staff is not expected to compromise on the issue of the chief executive's appointment powers.

Marshall Field counters takeover bid with lawsuit

by JOHN N. FRANK

A New York-based company wants to buy Marshall Field & Co., but the Chicago retailer has filed suit in federal court to stop the takeover.

Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc., which operates 71 department stores in California and the Southwest as was as prestige stores such as Neiman-Marcus Co. of Dallas and Bergdorf Goodman of New York City, is offering either stock or cash at the rate of $36 a share for Field's common stock.

Field's stock Monday closed at $22.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. The firm's annual report does not list who the majority stock holders of the company are.

STANDARD & POORS reports that 27 per cent of the company's stock is held by institutions.

If successful, the purchase would be one of the largest department store acquisitions in history.

But Field Pres. Angelo R. Arena Monday said attorneys have advised him such a purchase would violate U.S. antitrust laws. So Field filed suit in U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois alleging the acquisition would violate antitrust laws.

R.M. Hawley, president of Carter Hawley Hale, offered to exchange either stock or cash at the rate of $36 a share for Marshall Field's common stock.

However, Carter Hawley Hale would pay cash for not more than 49 per cent of Field's 9.05 million shares of common stock, a total of about $326 million.

FIELD OFFICIALS would offer no further comment on the possible acquisition, except to acknowledge receipt of a letter from Carter Hawley Hale proposing a merger based on the $36 a share offer.

Carter Hawley Hale officials in New York City were unavailable for comment.

Marshall Field & Co. had sales of $281.92 million in the six months ending July 31, up from $268.65 million a year earlier and earnings of $1.64 million or 18 cents a share, up from $1.53 million or 17 cents a share a year earlier.

Carter Hawley Hale has annual sales in the $1.5 billion range and earned $1.97 a share in its most recent fiscal year.

Among other prestigious stores, it owns the Broadway store chain on the West Coast and the Holt, Renfrew group in Canada.

When she did her book, Lady Harlech said she simply forgot where she obtained the recipes. Gun, credentials taken from deputy in shooting

by TOM VALEO

The Cook County Sheriff's Dept. Monday confiscated the gun and credentials of a deputy who allegedly fired a shot Saturday night while off-duty at a car containing an Elk Grove Village family.

Frank Caliendo, 27, of 1728 N. 17th Ave., Melrose Park, has been charged with agrravated assault and reckless conduct in connection with the incident.

He will remain a corrections officer at the Division 2 House of Corrections at 2900 S. California, Chicago, where he guards between 200 and 400 prisoners, a Dept. of Corrections spokesman said. Corrections officers do not carry guns while on duty and do not have to be deputized.

IF CONVICTED, Caliendo would face suspension since department rules do not allow correction officers to have any criminal convictions, the spokesman said.

Phillip Hardiman, executive director of the Cook County Department of Corrections, said no disciplinary action will be taken against Caliendo, pending the outcome of the trial.

Caliendo allegedly fired the shot at a car containing John Heil, 1454 Kathleen Way, Elk Grove Village, his wife, 3-year-old son and 9-month-old daughter as it sped away from a stoplight on Thorndale Avenue near I-90 late Saturday night. The car was not hit.

Caliendo said he stopped the Heil auto because he thought the driver was falling asleep. He said Heil had been braking and changing lanes dangerously while driving west on I-90.

Heil, however, said Caliendo was using his car to harass him.

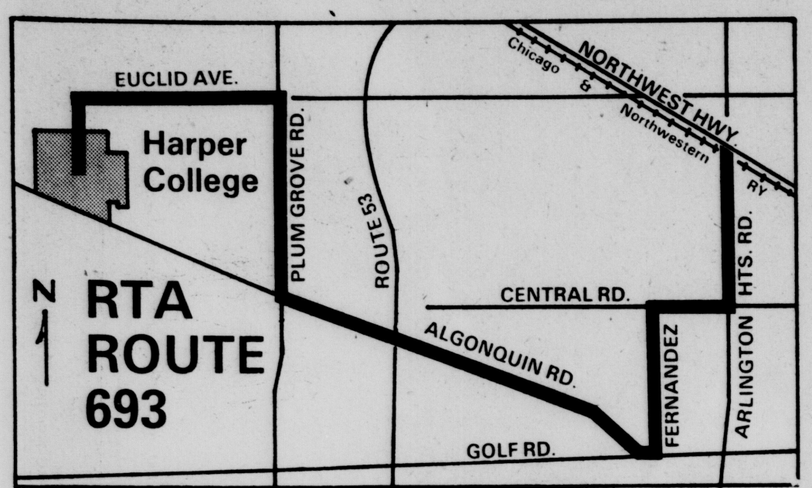
CALIENDO FOLLOWED the Heil auto off the expressway at the Thorndale exit and stopped behind him at the first stoplight, police said.

Caliendo said he got out of his car and went over to talk to Heil, to see if he could help him. Heil was abusive, Caliendo said, and the two argued. Caliendo said he tried to arrest Heil after he pushed his hand against Caliendo's face.

A fight followed, and Heil slammed his door, pinning Caliendo's right knee and shoulder in it and sped off, spinning him around and dragging him for several feet, Caliendo said. Caliendo was treated for knee and shoulder injuries at Sherman Hospital early Sunday morning.

Caliendo then drew his 45-caliber automatic pistol and fired, police said. Caliendo said he fired into the air, but an off-duty Itasca policeman who was stopped behind Caliendo at the light told Elk Grove police Caliendo leveled the gun at the Heil auto.

CALIENDO, who was injured and having difficulty breathing, got into his car and drove to the Jack in the Box restaurant at 1041 Rohlwing Rd., Elk Grove Village, identified himself as a Cook County Sheriff's Deputy and asked an employe to call the police.



A NEW MAJOR bus route in the Northwest suburbs is scheduled to start in late January between Arlington Heights and Harper College. The route will provide service to Northwest Community Hospital, the Meadows Intermediate Care Facility as well as major office and apartment complexes along Algonquin Road.

Bus route between Harper and Arlington Heights OK

A new major bus route will begin in the Northwest suburbs in late January, providing bus service between downtown Arlington Heights and Harper College.

The route, approved by the Regional Transportation Authority Monday, is designed to serve a variety of transit needs. It will provide transportation to Northwest Community Hospital, the Meadows Intermediate Care Facility and major office and apartment complexes along Algonquin Road.

Tentatively scheduled to begin Jan. 20, the new Route 693 will also connect with the popular North Suburban Mass Transit District (NORTRAN) Route 209 between Des Plaines and Woodfield Mall.

THE BUSES are scheduled to run hourly Monday through Friday starting at Harper College at 6:51 a.m. and at Arlington Heights at 7:15 a.m. The last bus will leave Harper College at 5 p.m., while the last bus from Arlington Heights will depart at 5:56 p.m. The fare will be 50 cents.

Richard Brazda of the RTA operational planning department said the bus was planned after contact with officials from Harper College, Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows.

The route starts at the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in Arlington Heights, proceeds south on Arlington Heights Road, west on Central Road and south on Fernandez Avenue to Golf Road. The route than heads northwest on Algonquin Road, north on Plum Grove Road and west on Euclid Avenue to Harper College.

Airporter Inc., a Lombard bus company, will operate the new route with a fleet of modified school-type buses with special interiors. The company already operates the new Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows commuter feeder service to the Chicago and North Western train stations.

The RTA will finance the route for at least a year at a cost of $40,500. The agency will then evaluate the route before deciding if it should be continued.

Barker indicted on murder count

A Cook County Grand Jury Monday indicted James E. Barker Jr., 17, on a murder charge, four counts of attempted murder and four counts of aggravated battery in connection with a shooting spree at a Mount Prospect games parlor Aug. 9. Barker, 1270 Wheeling Rd., Mount Prospect, will appear at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court for arraignment on the indictments.

Barker is charged in the murder of Otto Meisenheimer, 21, of 107 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Prospect Heights, and the wounding of four other persons who were shot at Just Games Inc., in Mount Prospect. Barker, 16 at the time of the shootings, was determined mentally fit to stand trial during hearings this fall in the Cook County Juvenile Court, Chicago.

City names firm to audit taxi books

A special City Council committee investigating last summer's taxi fare increase Monday named Arthur Young & Co. to audit the books of the city's cab companies. Only one of the six firms which sought the job, however, would estimate how long the task will take or how much it will cost. Ernest A. Wish, managing partner of Coopers and Lybrand, said the investigation could take as much as six months and cost up to $150,000. The committee was formed to look into charges that Mayor Michael A. Bilandic "greased" the increase.

Gordon Mertens, 32, serving from three to nine years for possessing stolen property, was believed to have been hiding in the prison's steam tunnel system. He was reported missing earlier Friday. Mertens is one of four members of a Barrington Hills family convicted last May by a McHenry County Circuit Court jury.

'Student may sue medical school'

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Monday a student may sue the Chicago Medical School which is accused of basing admissions chiefly on the ability of applicants to pledge large sums of money to the school. The complaint by Robert Steinberg was originally tossed out of Cook County Circuit Court on grounds he had no cause of action. Steinberg had filed a class action suit saying Chicago Medical School should be compelled to evaluate him and other applicants only on the basis of brochure criteria, not their ability to come up with huge pledges. The Supreme Court agreed, saying by accepting Steinberg's $15 application fee, the school opened itself up to fraud and breach of contract suits.

A spokesman for Chicago Medical School said Monday that the school's attorney had not read the Supreme Court decision and that officials would have no comment. The opinion said accepting an application fee is "similar to . . . a merchant advertising goods for sale at a fixed price. While the advertisement itself is not an offer to contract, it constitutes an invitation to deal on the terms described in the advertisement." The court noted Chicago Medical School' 1974-75 brochure said admissions would be based on academic criteria but said nothing about pledge money, even though, the court said, in another case it was accused from 1970 through 1973 of extracting pledges averaging from $30,000 to $48,000 from well over half those in entering classes. The case was sent back to Cook County Circuit Court.

Rescind renovation plan, group asks Dist. 214

A spokesman for the Taxpayers Action Group Monday asked the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education to rescind its approval of a $17.5 million plan for building improvements.

"The board seems to use as a mandate the recommendation of the citizens committee, but I don't believe the committee represents the citizens of the area," Harold Best, the spokesman told the board.

A districtwide citizens committee in October advised Dist. 214 officials to trim a list of $35 million in building renovations proposed by an earlier committee and finance necessary improvements with existing funds rather than with a tax rate increase. The committee said it didn't believe a $35 million referendum had a chance of passing.

"IF THEY BELIEVE a referendum wouldn't pass I don't know why they made the recommendation they did," Best said.

"Obviously if a referendum won't pass the citizens are not for these things."

Board Pres. Jack Costello said that while the $35 million referendum probably wouldn't pass, "a lesser one would, provided we put the story out properly."

Board member Marilyn Quinn told Best that while she appreciates his views there is "a large body of people out there telling us to get on with this (the renovations)."

The building improvement plan approved by the board Nov. 28 includes extensive remodeling of Forest View and Arlington high schools, construction of a swimming pool at Elk Grove High School and expansion of physical education facilities at all eight of the district's schools.

Best said his reading of state law indicates the district cannot undertake such a major capital improvements program without a referendum, but Business Mgr. Robert Weber said the district's attorney has advised him otherwise.

ALTHOUGH THE board has not decided how to finance the improvements, administrators have noted that $15 million for renovations could be raised over the next five years by annually setting aside 14 cents of the district's tax rate of $2.39 per $100 of equalized assessed valuation. This money otherwise would be added to the district's $22.7 million tax reserve unless the tax rate were lowered.

High court urged to reject bid for Viator rehearing

Arguing that the zoning dispute over the proposed Lincoln Green housing project does not have national importance, Metropolitan Housing Development Corp. officials have urged the U.S. Supreme Court to reject the Village of Arlington Heights' request for a second hearing.

In a brief filed Monday, the development corporation says that the village's zoning ordinance has been found invalid and asks that it be allowed to proceed with plans to build integrated housing.

Last month Village Atty. Jack Siegel asked the high court to again uphold the village's decision to refuse to rezone 15 acres near St. Viator High School for a low-and moderate-income housing project because the case has "great national consequence."

THE SUPREME COURT ruled in January 1977 that the village's refusal to rezone land for 190 federally subsidized townhouses was not racially discriminatory. However, the high court ordered the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals to decide whether the village's action violated fair housing laws.

The appeals court ruled in July that the village must find a suitable site for low-cost housing or be found in violation of fair housing laws and later refused to reconsider that decision. Village officials have maintained it's not their responsibility to find an alternative site for the housing project.

Gas line leak causes noxious odor

A leak in an underground gasoline pipe at an Arlington Heights service station caused a noxious odor in the downtown area Monday afternoon and forced some boilers to be turned off temporarily, a fire department spokesman said.

The problem was caused by a break in a pipe between underground storage tanks and pumps at K and H Standard, Arlington Heights Road and Miner Street, Lt. John Niemiec said.

"Gas was leaking out and with the thaw today (Monday) it began running into sewers underground that are connected to buildings," Niemiec said.

The result was an unpleasant but harmless odor in dozens of builidngs in the downtown area, Niemiec said.

Boilers at several buildings, including Recreation Park, 500 E. Miner St., were turned off temporarily, Niemiec said, as a precautionary measure.

"In no instance was the amount of gas enough to be a danger, but in several instances boilers were turned off just to be safe," he said.

He said complaints were received from persons in buildings from Oakton to Sigwalt streets, but that no one was injured from inhaling the fumes or evacuated from their homes.

Standard Oil personnel began repairing the leak Monday afternoon. Niemiec said the smell should be gone by this morning.

Lynwood annex to get park review

Arlington Heights park commissioners tonight are expected to decide whether to appeal an Illinois Appellate Court ruling that the involuntary annexation of the Lynnwood subdivision was illegal.

Thomas Thornton, park director, said the decision will be made in an executive session during today's 7:30 p.m. board meeting at 800 E. Falcon Dr.

The unincorporated area bounded by Wilke and Palatine roads, Harvard Avenue and Thomas Street was annexed involuntarily by the park district Dec. 10, 1974.

The annexation was made possible by a state law authorizing park district officials to annex land bordering park property by a lake, river, railroad or highway.

The 1st District Appellate Court last week agreed with residents of the Lynnwood area that the park district's interpretation of Chicago Avenue as a highway was improper.

The suit against the park district was brought by 17 families in the area.

2 Chicagoans charged in robbery

Police Monday arrested two Chicagoans wanted in connection with a home invasion Saturday morning in which an Arlington Heights man was tied up and $47 in cash and stereo equipment were stolen.

Luther G. Brewington, 25, and Patricia A. Buford, 22, were charged with robbery after being arrested in Chicago. Police are seeking three other Chicago residents also wanted in connection with the robbery.

Police said Raymond A. Kinmonth, 52, of 431 S. Reuter Ave., apparently was followed home by four of the suspects after he left a Chicago bar with one of the suspects.

Police said they used descriptions provided by Kinmonth to make the arrests.

Brewington is being held on $50,000 bond in the Arlington Heights lockup and is to appear at 9 a.m. today in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court. Ms. Buford is being held on $25,000 bond and is to appear at 9 a.m. Dec. 16 in court.

Vance fails to get Hussein to visit Cairo

U.S. Sec. of State Cyrus Vance failed Monday to convince Jordan's King Hussein to participate in this week's Middle East peace talks in Cairo. But Hussein did not rule out attending a later conference, perhaps at Geneva.

While saying he was "more optimistic than I have been in a long time," the king also warned that if peace efforts fail, "I cannot even tell you the disasters that will befall the area, and even the world."

In Damascus, Syria's official Syrian Arab News Agency quoted sources close to President Hafez Assad as saying that "Syria will excuse itself from receiving Mr. Vance (when he arrives Tuesday) if he . . . is carrying a letter from the Israeli leaders to the Arab leaders."

A SPOKESMAN for Vance — who just completed two days of talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin — said any suggestion the secretary of state was bearing such a note was "nonsense."

But the incident served to stress that Syria remained adamantly opposed to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Israel and to the follow-up talks scheduled to begin in Cairo Wednesday morning.

Vatican City sources said Monday Pope Paul VI will send an observer to the Cairo talks, which now include representatives of Egypt, Israel, the United States and the United Nations.

The sources said the Roman Catholic Church has a special interest in any decisions made over the future of Jerusalem and the Holy Land, where there are numerous Christian religious sites.

HUSSEIN TOLD a news conference that Sadat was "devoting all his time and energies for a comprehensive settlement.

"As far as the conference in Cairo is concerned," he said, "we made our position clear. However, that does not mean hopefully at a later stage, possibly in Geneva, we and others will not do our duty in the quest for peace."

Jordan has said it will attend the Cairo talks only if all parties concerned in the Middle East conflict agree to go — something that has not happened.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Monday Israel and Egypt could reach a separate peace agreement within 10 days, but Sadat does not want it.

"IF EGYPT CHANGES its mind and had they been ready to negotiate an agreement between Egypt and Israel, that can be concluded," he said when asked what could be achieved in the first 10 days of the Cairo conference.

"We're ready to discuss even a separate peace with Egypt but they don't want it," Dayan said.

In Cairo, government officials said the Israeli, U.S. and U.N. delegations would arrive Tuesday morning and hold a preliminary session to work out procedural rules.

Security was reported extremely tight in the Egyptian capital.

Youths go on wild rampage in Rome

Police in robot-like bulletproof suits fired warning shots and hauled in 328 people Monday during a wild rampage all over Rome by thousands of leftist youths. The youths hurled firebombs and rocks at police, who retaliated with tear gas grenades and occasional shots over the heads of the demonstrators. Masked youths wielded clubs, tossed firebombs and hurled rocks through windows in 15 areas of Rome from the historic center to the outskirts after police banned a march to commemorate the eighth anniversary of a bomb explosion in a Milan bank that killed 16.

Although no one has been convicted of the Milan bombing, the worst terrorist attack in postwar Italy, leftists have always claimed it was the work of Fascists. Firemen were called out 25 times as the demonstrators attacked four local headquarters of the ruling Christian Democratic Party and two officers of the neo-fascist MSI party.

U.S. Soviets swap 'slaps'

The United States attacked the Soviet Union at the Belgrade Conference Monday for imprisoning human rights activists. Angry Soviet delegates retorted that Washington "has no moral right to teach other countries about human rights." U.S. delegate R. Spencer Oliver told the conference the United States has observed repeated violations of the human rights guarantees of the 1975 Helsinki agreement. The 35-nation Belgrade conference was called to review that accord. It was the sharpest American attack on the Soviet Union at the conference in five weeks.

Soviet delegate Vadim Loginov retorted, "The United States has no moral right to teach other countries about human rights. "Life in the United Sttes is not perfect," he said. "It includes the right to go without expensive medical care and the right of minorities to be discriminated against. So who are to be the judges of others?" he asked. "Are the judges to be those who used napalm and terrible weapons of destruction to kill hundreds of thousands of people in Vietnam and wipe hundreds of villages off the face of the earth?"

Rejection seen in firefighter vote

Britain's 35,000 striking firefighters voted Monday on the government's latest pay offer but returns from London and much of the rest of the country indicated no end in sight to their month-long walkout. Results showed an overwhelming rejection of the three-stage pay offer from London's more than 6,000 firefighters and a London regional meeting was called for Tuesday to announce the citywide verdict.

'Morning after' pills called risky

Citing an increased risk of breast cancer among women treated with DES, Ralph Nader's health researchers Monday urged the government to crack down on "morning after" birth control pills that contain the hormone. The Health Research Group also said millions of women who have been exposed to the estrogen should be notified they may run a greater risk of cancer. To back up its request, the group cited a report from the University of Chicago to the National Institute of Health on a 1950-52 experiment at the school. It has been documented previously that some women in the experiment who took DES to prevent miscarriages later had sons with birth defects and daughters who developed vaginal cancer.

Reds increasing military strength

The administration warned Congress Monday that North Korea is increasing its military strength and remains uninterested in any political settlement with South Korea. President Carter, the administration's report to Congress said, still plans to withdraw all U.S. ground troops from South Korea but the United States will have to continue air, naval and arms support of Seoul. "North Korea continues to threaten the stability of the region. The threat it poses to the Republic of Korea (South Korea) remains serious," said the report required by the foreign aid law.

Three Steps to Early Disease Detection

1. An analysis of your lifestyle and health history will help in determining the probability of you contacting disease. This information also will be helpful in identifying changes in your normal activity which have proven to add to general good health and increase life expectancy.

2. Diagnostic tests including blood analysis, chest x-rays, an electrocardiogram, and urinalysis will help determine the presence or absence of disease. If further testing is indicated, it will be prescribed by the physician.

3. After a complete and comprehensive physical examination by a member of the hospital's Medical Staff, you will receive an interpretation of all results and suggestions for a personalized health program.

These steps are all part of the Early Disease Detection Program of Holy Family and the hospital's Medical Staff practicing in your community.

Call us Monday through Friday, at 297-1800, extension 1157, to obtain more information on how you can take these three steps to Early Disease Detection.

"IF EGYPT CHANGES its mind and had they been ready to negotiate an agreement between Egypt and Israel, that can be concluded," he said when asked what could be achieved in the first 10 days of the Cairo conference.

"We're ready to discuss even a separate peace with Egypt but they don't want it," Dayan said.

In Cairo, government officials said the Israeli, U.S. and U.N. delegations would arrive Tuesday morning and hold a preliminary session to work out procedural rules.

Security was reported extremely tight in the Egyptian capital.

Youths go on wild rampage in Rome

Police in robot-like bulletproof suits fired warning shots and hauled in 328 people Monday during a wild rampage all over Rome by thousands of leftist youths. The youths hurled firebombs and rocks at police, who retaliated with tear gas grenades and occasional shots over the heads of the demonstrators. Masked youths wielded clubs, tossed firebombs and hurled rocks through windows in 15 areas of Rome from the historic center to the outskirts after police banned a march to commemorate the eighth anniversary of a bomb explosion in a Milan bank that killed 16.

Although no one has been convicted of the Milan bombing, the worst terrorist attack in postwar Italy, leftists have always claimed it was the work of Fascists. Firemen were called out 25 times as the demonstrators attacked four local headquarters of the ruling Christian Democratic Party and two officers of the neo-fascist MSI party.

U.S. Soviets swap 'slaps'

The United States attacked the Soviet Union at the Belgrade Conference Monday for imprisoning human rights activists. Angry Soviet delegates retorted that Washington "has no moral right to teach other countries about human rights." U.S. delegate R. Spencer Oliver told the conference the United States has observed repeated violations of the human rights guarantees of the 1975 Helsinki agreement. The 35-nation Belgrade conference was called to review that accord. It was the sharpest American attack on the Soviet Union at the conference in five weeks.

Soviet delegate Vadim Loginov retorted, "The United States has no moral right to teach other countries about human rights. "Life in the United Sttes is not perfect," he said. "It includes the right to go without expensive medical care and the right of minorities to be discriminated against. So who are to be the judges of others?" he asked. "Are the judges to be those who used napalm and terrible weapons of destruction to kill hundreds of thousands of people in Vietnam and wipe hundreds of villages off the face of the earth?"

Rejection seen in firefighter vote

Britain's 35,000 striking firefighters voted Monday on the government's latest pay offer but returns from London and much of the rest of the country indicated no end in sight to their month-long walkout. Results showed an overwhelming rejection of the three-stage pay offer from London's more than 6,000 firefighters and a London regional meeting was called for Tuesday to announce the citywide verdict.

'Morning after' pills called risky

Citing an increased risk of breast cancer among women treated with DES, Ralph Nader's health researchers Monday urged the government to crack down on "morning after" birth control pills that contain the hormone. The Health Research Group also said millions of women who have been exposed to the estrogen should be notified they may run a greater risk of cancer. To back up its request, the group cited a report from the University of Chicago to the National Institute of Health on a 1950-52 experiment at the school. It has been documented previously that some women in the experiment who took DES to prevent miscarriages later had sons with birth defects and daughters who developed vaginal cancer.

Reds increasing military strength

The administration warned Congress Monday that North Korea is increasing its military strength and remains uninterested in any political settlement with South Korea. President Carter, the administration's report to Congress said, still plans to withdraw all U.S. ground troops from South Korea but the United States will have to continue air, naval and arms support of Seoul. "North Korea continues to threaten the stability of the region. The threat it poses to the Republic of Korea (South Korea) remains serious," said the report required by the foreign aid law.

Three Steps to Early Disease Detection

1. An analysis of your lifestyle and health history will help in determining the probability of you contacting disease. This information also will be helpful in identifying changes in your normal activity which have proven to add to general good health and increase life expectancy.

2. Diagnostic tests including blood analysis, chest x-rays, an electrocardiogram, and urinalysis will help determine the presence or absence of disease. If further testing is indicated, it will be prescribed by the physician.

3. After a complete and comprehensive physical examination by a member of the hospital's Medical Staff, you will receive an interpretation of all results and suggestions for a personalized health program.

These steps are all part of the Early Disease Detection Program of Holy Family and the hospital's Medical Staff practicing in your community.

Call us Monday through Friday, at 297-1800, extension 1157, to obtain more information on how you can take these three steps to Early Disease Detection.

Farmer strike could stop with vow to meet demands

With thousands of America's farmers threatening to strike Wednesday, President Carter still could halt the agricultural walkout by pledging to meet farmers' demands for a fair wage for their crops, a farm leader said Monday.

"We're hopeful there can be a meeting between the President and American Agriculture leaders in Washington Tuesday," said Keith Thomas of Springfield, Colo., a founder of the strike movement. "We have people there waiting to meet with him."

Thomas said he hoped large demonstrations by thousands of tractor-riding farmers at state capitals and Washington last weekend would convince the President and other political leaders the farmers are serious.

UNLESS THEY receive promises of 100 per cent parity, they will begin their strike Wednesday. Parity is the price that would cover a farmer's cost in raising his product as well as assure a reasonable profit.

But no one — not even leaders of American Agriculture — know how many of the nation's farmers will take part in the strike. U.S. Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland has said the federal government can play only a limited role in remedying the farmers' economic plight.

Farm organizations in several states have questioned the effectiveness of the proposal and the National Farmers Organization in Corning, Iowa, refused to officially endorse the effort, although it supports the right of farmers to strike.

NFO President Oren Lee Staley, a Rea, Mo., farmer, said he would participate in the strike and pledged he would not "have anything going to market for a very long time."

FARMERS FROM more than 40 states met in Denver Monday to discuss the strike situation. It was the first meeting of its kind by members of American Agriculture, a grassroots movement which began 90 days ago on southeast Colorado's plains.

"Basically, we're just telling one another what we're going to do," Thomas said. "We can't tell anyone what to do. What everyone does on the strike day is up to the individuals. I don't have any idea any more than anyone else. I don't know for sure if anything is going to happen."

Farmers were encouraged by their weekend meeting in Denver with Vice President Walter Mondale who promised to take their message to Carter.

"The family farm is the backbone of this country," Mondale said. "We have a farmer in the White House. We have a farmer who is the secretary of agriculture. I come from a farm block state. We are not going to let these people down."

datory retirement."

The legislation was sparked in part by this case, in which McMann has been battling in court since 1973 against his forced retirement at age 60 by United Airlines.

"This is going to be the end of the line as far as my case is concerned," McMann said Monday in an interview. "I was hoping the judges would see it my way, but they didn't. I hope the congressmen can get together now and reconcile the situation."

Chief Justice Warren Burger delivered the majority opinion — one of a series of actions before the court recessed until Jan. 9.

AT ISSUE was a section of the act that says it is not "unlawful for an employer . . . to observe . . . any bona fide employe benefit plan . . . which is not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the act."

"We find nothing to indicate Congress intended wholesale invalidation of retirement plans instituted in good faith" before passage of the act, said Burger, or intended "to require employers to bear the burden of showing a business or economic purpose to justify bona fide pre-existing plans as the Fourth Circuit concluded."

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in a dissenting opinion joined by Justice William Brennan, said the majority opinion gave "an unduly narrow interpretation" to the act in this first major ruling on it.

"We need not decide on a strictly grammatical basis," Marshall said. "We are judges, not linguists, and our task is to divine congressional intent using all available evidence."

Marshall said the act's prohibition against discrimination in hiring older Americans is at cross purposes with Monday's ruling that they may be forced to retire.

IN OTHER actions Monday, the court:

- Refused to temporarily halt a trial in Houston aimed at proving that Texas was the legal residence of millionaire Howard Hughes at the time of his death.
- Ruled 8-0 that the rights of an accused Chicago rapist were violated by the "suggestive manner" in which the victim was asked to identify him at a preliminary hearing where he had no lawyer.
- Granted a hearing to a construction company that was found to have differing hiring plans for black and white bricklayers at a Chicago project.
- Turned aside an appeal by three scientists who lost their libel suit against the New York Times and a National Audubon Society official.

Village needs nepotism ban

Streamwood Trustee Jack Fehlandt has the right idea in his attempt to ensure that tax dollars are spent on hiring the best possible Streamwood employes rather than on employes who happen to be related to others at village hall.

He has proposed an ordinance to limit the number of family members in the same department of village government. His actions came after the fourth member of the same family became the newest employe of the water department.

And although all civil service practices apparently were followed in the hiring procedure, Fehlandt says if you look at the entire Streamwood municipal payroll there are simply too many persons related by blood or marriage.

He calls the situation unhealthy, and he's right. "I've seen in my private industry experience that it can create problems," and it's just a matter of good common sense not to overload the payroll with family members, he said.

The issue is a sensitive one. It would be easy if these relatives were loafing on the job or otherwise performing poorly. That's not the case.

What is the issue is the question of whether a supervisor can impartially evaluate the performance of his brother or son or other members of his family. He shouldn't have to.

Passage of the hiring ordinance will prevent that kind of predicament from happening in the future.

Fehlandt's ordinance is in no way vindictive because it does not affect current employes. What it does is tell Streamwood taxpayers that being a relative will have nothing to do with future hiring and should ensure that village government does not become a family affair.

Arabs give up sympathy

The efforts to reach a just and lasting mideast peace settlement were dealt a severe blow last week with the break in diplomatic relations between Egypt and five of its former allies.

Egypt broke diplomatic ties with Syria, Libya, Algeria, Iraq and South Yemen after those countries condemned Egyptian Pres. Anwar Sadat's peace overtures to Israel. The break leaves the Arab bloc, once unified in its opposition to Israel, in disarray.

The blame in this affair lies not with Egypt for breaking the ties but with the radical Arab leadership in those five countries which cannot accept Sadat's unique and statesmanlike stance in dealing with its powerful Jewish neighbor.

The split has cost the Arab world much of the progress it has made in securing an honorable peace settlement with Israel since the 1973 war. Until now, world sentiment, including that of Israel's staunchest supporter, the United States, has been gradually shifting toward the Arab cause. Arab leaders tempered their public pronouncement on Israel, and thereby won over much world public opinion.

In dramatic style, the situation has reversed and Israel has regained much sympathy.

The situation demonstrates clearly the deep animosity which exists in the Middle East. Arab leaders who publicly were paying lip service to moderation have shown they would rather see Israel destroyed than live in peace with the Jewish state on the basis of a just peace settlement.

That stance, if continued, will be the downfall of the Arab cause.

Skinner probe needed

Sam Skinner is probing again, and this time the target is alleged union gouging at McCormick Place.

The former U.S. Attorney has been hired by officials of the lakefront exhibition hall to investigate charges of thefts from exhibitors and overcharging.

We're glad to see a man of Skinner's reputation get picked to handle the investigation. Charges of union gouging are not new at McCormick Place and it's time a thorough investigation be made before exhibitors take their dollars elsewhere.

Cobo Hall in Detroit was beset with the same problems a few years back. When exhibitors stopped coming to Cobo Hall, the unions finally realized it was to their advantage to take another look at their manpower requirements and fee schedules.

Chicago's unions should cooperate in the same way and realize that keeping McCormick Place a vital exhibition center is good business for everyone.

Institute of Medicine has credibility on hot potatoes

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

The entire federal establishment heaved a sigh of relief the day President Carter signed an 18-month suspension of the saccharin ban previously ordered by the Food and Drug Administration.

For the moment, Congress is off the hook with the food industry and diet-conscious consumers who inundated Capitol Hill with protests against the FDA ban. And that means FDA will have a respite from congressional pressure, while the White House won't have to deal with any of the above for at least a year and a half.

The only people in town who can't forget about rats and diet soda, in fact, are the professional staff and members of the little-known Institute of Medicine, an arm of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences.

THE INSTITUTE, by act of Congress, has been delegated the unenviable chore of deciding how much of a health threat saccharin poses to human beings and what counterbalancing benefits it offers.

At the same time, the Institute will conduct a separate study of the scientific community's ability to identify and evaluate cancer-causing elements in all types of food.

For those who follow health policy developments, it came as no surprise that Congress should turn to the Institute of Medicine for help with the saccharin controversy.

The seven-year-old Institute is rapidly becoming a prime repository for all kinds of political hot potatoes in the health field, from medical malpractice to the use of barbiturates for insomnia and anxiety.

THE REASON IS SIMPLE: credibility. The Institute has no ax to grind. It is not part of the federal government, but neither is it a captive of any segment of the health industry — the physicians, the drug companies, hospitals, research scientists, insurance companies.

Its 330 members are elected for five-year terms from all of these fields, plus others such as law, sociology, economics and journalism which are unrelated to medicine and health.

In exchange for the honor of membership, which is considerable, they donate their talents to studies which the Institute undertakes on its own initiative or at the request of the federal government.

The Institute's clout has grown immensely this past year. HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. tried repeatedly to persuade its president, Dr. David A. Hamburg, to accept the government's top health job. Failing that, he has staffed nearly all of HEW's major health positions with other Institute members recommended by Hamburg.

HAMBURG, 52, WHO was chief of the psychiatry department at the Stanford University School of Medicine for 15 years prior to assuming the Institute presidency, remains a trusted Califano adviser and confidant.

He also swings considerable weight at the White House. President Carter's top health adviser, Dr. Peter Bourne, just happens to be a former student of Hamburg's.

For good measure, congressional health subcommittees headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Paul G. Robert, D-Fla., also rely heavily upon the Institute of Medicine for policy analysis and research evaluation.

Since Congress and the executive branch are not always in accord on health matters — witness the dispute over FDA's saccharin ban — the Institute is ideally positioned to serve as a neutral arbiter.

Hamburg and his colleagues have no votes in Congress, no regulatory powers, no fat federal contracts to distribute. But their independence and their expertise command such respect both within and outside the government that the Institute of Medicine is likely to wield increasing influence over the direction of health policy the next few years.

Tumblin' tumbleweeds hunted by FDA moths

by DICK WEST
(The lighter side)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some nights I lie awake making mental lists of the things I would try to save if the house caught fire.

Almost always, top priority is given to my copy of the Sons of The Pioneers' recording of "Tumbling Tumbleweeds." With "Cool Water" on the flip side.

I have what is probably an abnormally strong affinity for tumbleweeds. It is one of those feelings that are hard to share with other people, most of whom can pretty much take tumbleweeds or leave them alone.

ON A FAVORITE plant scale of 1 to 10, most people would rank tumbleweeds down among the peonies, or about 3.1415. Once, at Christmas, I had my sister in Texas mail me a tumbleweed as a family surpise. It arrived in a big box and my wife and kids got really excited about it — until they opened it.

Talk about discouraging words! Cripes, you never heard such carrying on. You would have thought I had shot Santa Claus. But I didn't let their negative reaction get me down.

I sprayed the tumbleweed with silver paint, hung it from the living room ceiling and festooned it with tinsel and silver bells. I never saw anything more beautiful. But I can't take credit for the idea.

I once attended a Christmas barn dance in Anson, Tex., where they had the entire ceiling decorated that way. It nearly blew my mind.

YULETIDE NOSTALGIA may be one of the reasons I was distressed to learn that the U.S. Department of Agriculture is bent on wiping tumbleweeds out.

The agent of destruction is to be a small, white moth called Coleophora Parterica. Discovery that this insect is "the natural enemy of tumbleweed" is billed as one of the "agricultural research highlights" of 1977.

Which makes one wonder what the lowlights must be like.

According to a USDA brochure, the next step is "establishing strong field colonies of this moth, a native of Pakistan."

NOW COMES CATCH 22:

"The moth spends its entire life cycle in the weed and won't look elsewhere for its food." What that really means is the moth won't look elsewhere for its food as long as there are plenty of tumbleweeds available. But what happens when the tumbleweeds have disappeared?

Does anyone seriously believe swarms of hungry Pakistani moths are going to sit around in America and starve?

You and I well know they'll be out looking for alternate sources of nourishment. And we also well know that in another 10 years one of the USDA's research "highlights" will be frantic experiments to find some way to control tumbleweed moths.

At that time, if any of the Sons of the Pioneers still survive, perhaps they'll cut another record. I can hear the lyrics now . . . "Drifting along with the Coleophora Parthenica."

ERA wins his support

In regard to a Fence Post letter of Nov. 26, authored by Elizabeth McCallum, I would like to politely point out that she misses the point in the debate over ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

While she is obviously well versed on the subject of legal precedents in amendatory proceedings, Ms. McCallum seems to side-step the underlying issue of human rights.

Her argument, which seems to be of the same school of thought as George F. Will's "Stacking the Deck on ERA," Newsweek, Nov. 14, is based on the assumption that the brouhaha over passage of the ERA is only a matter of legal pyrotechnics of "contemporaneous" procedures.

My understanding of the situation is that women (and men?) want equal protection under the law of their "unalienable rights" (listed in the Declaration of Independence). It is merely a vehicle to facilitate the implementation of principles in a real world.

I would also like to know how she can make the broad and vague generalization of extrapolating the fact that 15 states have not ratified the ERA to the staement "the women (and men) of America do not want the Equal Rights Amendment added to our Constitution." Perhaps Ms. McCallum would care to elucidate. Unless my math is wrong, 15 states do not equal the sum of "the women (and men) of America."

As pastor of Hope Lutheran Church in Buffalo Grove-Long Grove I wish to express my sincere thanks to your fine newspaper for the cooperation it has given to our newly forming congregation. Your paper has carried many important articles concerning our new ministry which I'm sure is of interest to area residents. We at Hope appreciate your help in bringing us to the attention of the public.

I also wish to thank Wheeling Twp. Dist. 21 for cooperation in providing a place of worship for us. Their willingness to assist us again speaks of their concern for the total life of this community. I also owe a debt of gratitude to many area pastors and congregations (of all denominations) for their assistance. I especially wish to thank Twin Grove Baptist Church for letting us use their church facilities on a couple of occasions.

But most of all, I want to extend a word of thanks to the many residents of Buffalo Grove-Long Grove who received me so warmly at their doorsteps and gave me a chance to share a word or two about our new congregation. I cherish the opportunities I have had to visit with people of all faiths and denominations and deeply treasure the friendships that have been created. We at Hope are happy to be a part of this fine community.

Pastor Michael McPherson

SITTING IN OUR rented home as we await the renovation of the home we own which was gutted by a major fire two weeks ago, we're gratefully reviewing the many kindnesses shown us during our crisis. We would like to thank not only our wonderful friends, neighbors and relatives, but also the Des Plaines firemen who were absolutely fantastic! Amid all the panic involved in the process of putting out a major fire, we were amazed at their concern for saving as much of our furniture and personal possessions as possible. Not only were many paintings removed from the wall, but furniture was scurried to the center of rooms and covered with tarps for their protection! All this, while fighting the blaze in record time!

Our special thanks to Lieutenants Davis and Lechner who visited us again to instruct us on future fire prevention measures to take when our home is rebuilt and we are once more living in it. One of the things they stressed was the installation of smoke detectors. They pointed out that had we had them, we would have been warned a lot sooner and thus suffered far less damage than we did. Rest assured, we'll follow the advice they gave us and we hope this letter will alert others to do likewise.

SITTING IN OUR rented home as we await the renovation of the home we own which was gutted by a major fire two weeks ago, we're gratefully reviewing the many kindnesses shown us during our crisis. We would like to thank not only our wonderful friends, neighbors and relatives, but also the Des Plaines firemen who were absolutely fantastic! Amid all the panic involved in the process of putting out a major fire, we were amazed at their concern for saving as much of our furniture and personal possessions as possible. Not only were many paintings removed from the wall, but furniture was scurried to the center of rooms and covered with tarps for their protection! All this, while fighting the blaze in record time!

Our special thanks to Lieutenants Davis and Lechner who visited us again to instruct us on future fire prevention measures to take when our home is rebuilt and we are once more living in it. One of the things they stressed was the installation of smoke detectors. They pointed out that had we had them, we would have been warned a lot sooner and thus suffered far less damage than we did. Rest assured, we'll follow the advice they gave us and we hope this letter will alert others to do likewise.

Press out to smear Billy Graham organization, biographer charges

by DAVID POLING
Commentary

During the past six months Billy Graham has endured more criticism than at any time in his 30-year career. Always the center of discussion for irritated critics, Graham has had a unique gift to rise above the name-calling or fault-finding in the past. And historically, most of the criticism, friendly or otherwise, has been directed to his preaching style or theological stance.

Local crusades usually incite a tug-of-war between theological liberals and Bible-believing fundamentalists, with the middle ground creating the healthy compromise that makes a Graham appearance possible, whether in London, Cincinnati or Manila.

And in spite of these theological critics or secular cynics, Billy has done just as well in London as in Los Angeles. He is the first global Christian celebrity in human history. His message made it possible — television made it happen.

BUT BACK TO THE rock throwing of 1977. The criticism of the past six months has been more lethal, less theological. The attacks have been aimed directly at the financial management of the Graham organization and the personal integrity of the evangelist himself.

In June of this year, newspaper and magazine articles and television commentary alleged that Billy had amassed a secret fund, starting back in 1970, and now exceeding $20 million. Sort of a private fortune just sitting there for Billy to dip into when the spirit moved him or a pal needed a few thousand 'til payday.

The truth is that Billy had informed the press years earlier that he hoped someday to establish an evangelistic center at Wheaton College in Wheaton, Ill. The costs would be substantial and the fund-raising for such an enterprise would take the better part of a decade. In 1974 I interviewed the evangelist at the Case Blanca Inn in Scottsdale, Ariz.

He mentioned this project in passing and also spelled out his enthusiasm for a laity retreat center in North Carolina where Christian men and women could gain advanced study in the Bible and enjoy the leisure and fellowship of such a setting.

GRAHAM HAD NO DOUBT that a major evangelistic center at Wheaton, with supporting faculty, living space and library facilities, would tasily cost $20 million, and such planning started long before the engulfing inflation of these days. Presently the center is under construction, the project costing far more than the $23 million in hand.

And what a shock to have a reporter, groomed in the style of headlines and audience, announce to the watching world that this was a Secret Slush Fund, used at the evangelist's discretion for minor league projects.

The misunderstanding or the innuendo surrounding the $23 million was further intensified by the Better Business Bureau. They said that the Graham organization would not get their approval — they had not filled out a questionnaire covering their business and operational expenses. Sounded evasive — were Graham's people hiding something? Were they embarrassed by their heavy salaries or unwieldy overhead cost and fund-raising charges? That was the charge that seemed to be implied in the bureau's pronouncement.

No one else seemed to care that there were 252,000 nonprofit corporations in America and the biggest ones chose not to file with the bureau. The largest Roman Catholic and Jewish charitable groups shrugged at the bureau's forms.

WHEN THE GRAHAM organization released their financial statement for 1976, $27 million was reported as gross income. Approximately 10 per cent of that total went to the reserve trust that would pay for the Wheaton center and fund special grants for evangelistic groups favored by the Graham organization.

The salary statement was revealing: Billy gets a flat $39,500. The 25 officers and executives with the religious headquarters in Minneapolis received a grand total of $248,000 in compensation. Not too heavy and surely in keeping for a group responsible for a $27 million annual budget.

During these past few weeks other Christian leaders have shared my concern regarding the charges leveled against Graham. Several have been highly critical of Billy's theology or his interpretation of the Bible. But all of them wanted you to have this message of their concern:

"MISLEADING AND OFTEN false interpretations have been circulated concerning the finances of the Billy Graham Organization. These published insinuations of wrong-doing or implied malfeasance cannot go unchallenged.

"We are familiar with the ministry of Billy Graham and join together to publicly affirm the financial integrity and accountability of Mr. Graham's enterprise." It is signed: David Poling, William Sloan Coffin Jr., Robert Mc Afee Brown, Theodore M. Hesburgh, William Stringfellow, Eldridge Cleaver, David Hyatt.

Billy will never lose his critics, for he was the first to say, "Christians do not always agree, but they can disagree agreeably and that what is needed in the church today is for us to show an unbelieving world that we love one another."

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

The Rev. David Poling is senior pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Albuquerque, N. M. His latest book is a biography of Billy Graham.

Carter optimistic about '78 outlook

Commentary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has a good feeling about 1978 and he expects that most of the initiatives he undertook in his first year in office will come to fruition.

To hear him tell it, the outlook is rosy both on the domestic front and in the foreign policy field. He says he expects to have a strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union and also a comprehensive nuclear test ban next year.

He also forecasts ratification of the controversial Panama Canal treaty — despite heavy opposition — and he is predicting major progress toward peace in the Middle East.

AT HOME, CARTER says there will be good progress in the recovery from the 1974-75 recession and although economic growth will not be as great as this year, it will be one of the best in the world.

As for unemployment, now at a steady 7 per cent — Carter says the rate will come down next year but he sees some upward swing in inflation.

The president marches to his own drum and does not appear fazed by criticism of the way he has handled his programs and of the way he runs the White House.

Although there is an apparent puzzlement in the nation over the administration and where Carter is going, the president feels he has set a stride that will bring much progress next year. He also believes that he has set a tone in the country that is helping to restore confidence in government.

But still he says the battle to bring the people back to faith in government has not yet been won.

CARTER BELIEVES that some of the questions that remain concerning his presidency are due to the fact that he was not an insider when he reached the White House, that he did not win the presidency by the Capitol Hill route and he was not well known to the news media.

Carter believes he has moved to keep campaign promises with the blacks, labor, farm groups and the poor.

But as far as those groups are concerned, he has not been as responsive as they had expected. As a result, his popularity has dropped in the polls and few are touting the Carter administration as a success story.

But Carter believes that his constituency — the American people — are calling in the chips too soon, that he is being judged too early and that his report card next year will show good marks in most of his endeavors.

800 seek office on first filing day

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — At least 800 candidates filed nominating petitions Monday in the first day for entering the 1978 general and primary elections.

Early filings reported by the State Board of Elections show that the 10th Congressional District Republican primary is the most active area race. Six Republican candidates already have lined up for the opportunity to run next November against incumbent U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th.

The filings produced few surprises for local races, where most of the candidates who already had announced they would run, submitted their petitions. Filing for state and county offices closes next Monday.

Besides the 10th District race, the next most active district appears to be the first legislative district where all of the incumbent officials have decided to run for other posts.

WHILE THE 10th District has a large number of candidates, neither U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane or any potential Democratic challenger filed petitions early in the neighboring 12th Congressional District.

Here are the early filings reported by the state board of elections. Names of those who filled after 8 a.m. Monday were not available Monday.

800 seek office on first filing day

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — At least 800 candidates filed nominating petitions Monday in the first day for entering the 1978 general and primary elections.

Early filings reported by the State Board of Elections show that the 10th Congressional District Republican primary is the most active area race. Six Republican candidates already have lined up for the opportunity to run next November against incumbent U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th.

The filings produced few surprises for local races, where most of the candidates who already had announced they would run, submitted their petitions. Filing for state and county offices closes next Monday.

Besides the 10th District race, the next most active district appears to be the first legislative district where all of the incumbent officials have decided to run for other posts.

WHILE THE 10th District has a large number of candidates, neither U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane or any potential Democratic challenger filed petitions early in the neighboring 12th Congressional District.

Here are the early filings reported by the state board of elections. Names of those who filled after 8 a.m. Monday were not available Monday.

10th Congressional District: (Des Plaines) Democrat — Abner J. Mikva, Evanston. Republicans — Eugene Salamon, Evanston; David Thomas, Glenview; Peter Pierce, Evanston; Richard Janecek, Des Plaines; State Rep. John E. Porter, Evanston; and Daniel Hales, Winnetka.

12th Congressional District: No filing reported.

1st Legislative District(portions of Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights) State Senate, Democrat — Cathleen Quinn O'Rourke, Glencoe. Republicans — Jeane H. Bradner, Winnetka; State Rep. Roger Keats, Wilmette.

2nd Legislative District (Palatine, Streamwood, Bartlett and Hanover Park)

State Senate, Democrat — no filings. Republicans — State Sen. John Graham, Barrington; Palatine Trustee Richard Fonte.

State House, Democrats — State Rep. Richard Mugalian, Palatine. Republicans — State Rep. John Friedland, South Elgin; State Rep. Roger Stanley, Streamwood; and Douglas Beers, Elgin.

3rd Legislative District (Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Palatine, Des Plaines) State Senate: No election in 1978.

State House: Democrats — State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, Arlington Heights; Deborah Miller, Hoffman Estates. Republicans — State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, Arlington Heights; State Rep. Donald Totten, Hoffman Estates.

State House: Democrats — State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, Skokie; John P. Grogin, Park Ridge. Republicans — State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, Arlington Heights, State Rep. Penny Pullen, Park Ridge.

In Hawaii, hanging loose way to dress

by ELEANOR RIVES

In Hawaii, teenagers may be able to get by on dungarees and T-shirts, but any mama like meme loves a muumuu.

Oh the muu! It's so mmm-breezy. It's cool. It's loose. It's radiant with color, blooming with flowers. When you're wearing a muumuu on Maui, don't stand in front of a bush in full bloom or your husband might lose you.

The missionaries knew what they were doing in the early 1800s when they introduced the muumuu, for it certainly covers a multitude of sins, especially those resulting from living it up at the luau.

Even hateful thin-line women with their hollow cheeks and near-perfect figures look fabulous in the muu, and have the option of choosing such fanciful variations as backless, plunging neckline, middle cutouts or side slits. There's even a formal muumuu, a fitted gown of silks from Thailand, Japan, India, Hong Kong or Hawaii, called the "holomu."

FLOWERED, FREE and flowing, the conventional muumuu abloom with deep pink hibiscus, white plumeria and green leaves on a blue background pleases everyone, even the carved wood Tiki god.

FIT TO BE TIED, this bold Polynesian neckwear, the tie at left in orange, gold, brown and white; at right, in navy, black, royal blue and white. Excellent buys for tourists to take home. Seldom are ties worn in Hawaii and never with an aloha shirt.

IN HAWAII, these leis would be made of live plumerial blossoms and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Stefanos, Des Plaines, would be spotted as tourists in their matching aloha shirt and muumuu. White flowers and green leaves contrast with the bright fuchsia fabric.

THE SHORT, street-length muumuu is designed for daytime wear. But in the evening, seldom do you see a woman whose dress doesn't reach the gorgeous ground.

Now this doesn't mean you won't wear summer-weight pantsuits (leave the jackets home — the layered look is ludicrous in Hawaii,) light slacks and cool, loose blouses. Shorts and tops are fine for the resorts, but rarely will they be seen on the streets of Honolulu. As for outerwear, whoever heard of a coat? A sweater, maybe, if you're bound for the summit of Mauna Kea or Haleakale; a fine knit shawl perhaps for a chance cool evening.

But for me, a muumuu is a must and you might as well buy yours in Hawaii where the prices are competive, the styles authentic and the selection of fabric and design inexhaustible. Waikiki is an excellent place to shop, with open-air bazaars, sidewalk displays and open-front shops teasing you. Also, almost every hotel has its own little Polynesian shop, and department stores, such as Sears, have their own Polynesian section.

HOWEVER, SHOULD you miss your chance in Honolulu, have no regrets. Your money is just as good in Maui, Hilo or Kauai and sometimes it's even more fun to shop in a picturesque whaling village such as Lahaina on Maui.

Plan on paying somewhere between $18 and $30 for a street-length version of the muu, or $25 to $45 for full length.

Colorful as they are, in Hawaii the females of the species are not the only ones in glowing plumage. The shops are overflowing with "aloha shirts" for men. They come in all sizes and colors, button front and over-the head styles, all intended to be worn open-neck and to hang loosely outside the pants.

TO HAWAIIAN MEN, the primitive Hawaiian Tapa designs have a slight edge over the brightly flowered fabrics that attract tourists so greatly. If you search diligently, you might purchase these for as little as $12. Chances are it will be closer to $20.

Tip: Our Hawaiian friend laughingly admitted that it's easy to spot the tourists — just look for the couple in matching fabrics — the husband's shirt matching his wife's muumuu. But if the idea appeals to you, go ahead, match.

Polynesian designs permeate men's ties, too, and although ties seldom are worn on the islands, they are a great buy to bring home. Resplendent in glowing colors, they are priced in the unbelievable range of $2.50 to $4.50.

OTHER GOOD clothing buys in Hawaii are Polynesian print bathing suits both bikini and one-piece, and swim trunks for men. There are darling irresistible outfits in the same bright colors for youngsters, "Grandma traps" if ever I saw one. And T-shirts for everyone — shops that sell only T-shirts, shops that superimpose your photograph on your T-shirt, whole T-shirt factories that invite you to come in and look around.

Hats are a good buy, too, from bright fabrics with floppy brims to oriental coolie hats to hats woven from palm tree leaves. The brim is the thing — it protects from both sun and rain, should you walk umbrellaless through the light warm drizzle, as do the Hawaiians. "It's just a little pineapple juice," they told us.

ON THE BEACH, barefoot is beautiful, but in other places, sandals are the most popular footwear. You'll find an excellent selection, from sandals for dress wear to Japanese "zoris" with velvet thongs and woven mat bottoms.

And don't forget to visit the fabric stores. Never have I seen such a gorgeous array of color — bolts of 48-inch width fabric that lit up the room with their royal blue, turquoise and emerald green Tapa designs, their profusion of glowing flowers, their Polynesian prints. Average price was $4 a yard.

So stunning were some silk-screened fabrics that they were sold to be used as wallhangings. Those were higher, but well worth the $11 for a yard and a half.

Whether you make them, bring them, or buy them there, clothes in Hawaii should be comfortable and breezy, give you plenty of room and sparkle with color.

Aloha.

Shawls the latest gift wrapping

by JACKIE LANDSBERG

Remember when the little match girl shivered on a street corner in a tattered shawl? Times have changed.

Today it's the fashion cognoscenti who are collecting shawls much in the way the rich horde big diamonds.

So why not add another shawl to her collection or start one? Three from Vera, the scarf lady, give you an idea of how they wrap up.

A BABY blanket plaid shawl with fringe looks like wool, but is 100 per cent acrylic. Perfect over slacks and a sweater in tan, mint or navy colorations, $14.

To highlight a dinner dress, a challis shawl with stripe center and border print is typical of the romantic, peasant trend. Black, camel or beige with multicolor stripes, $12.

For even more elegant moments, hand-crocheted silk-like rayon cord in an open weave with long, lush 12-inch fringe is $65. In white or black, it looks like a million.

Jewelry is another accessory that is always welcome at Christmas (or anytime, for that matter). But if Tiffany's won't give you credit, don't fret. Monet offers the understated but significant look of necklace, bar pin and earrings in classic love knot design. In silver or gold plate for $8.50, $6 and $7.50. That means you can afford all three and still splurge on gift wrap.

Winter handbags go big and small. By day, the bigger the better. Take Anne Klein & Co.'s horse's oats feed bag style in buttery tan and taupe leathers for $75. Or a super-big body bag with open outer pocket from Morris Moskowitz, in assorted autumn leave shades, $125.

SHAWLS MAKE A smashing fashion accessory. Silk-like cord open weave, left, with 12-inch fringe is ideal for evening wear, about $65. Printed challis, center, is for daytime, about $12, while baby blanket plaid with fringe in acrylic look-alike wool tops sweater, coat or evening pants, about $14. All by Vera.

FOR EVENING the small bag that's still roomy enough to carry all those essentials comes in a bargello flame stitch or suede sherred and trimmed in gold kid with golden shoulder strap. The tapestry is $96,- the suede $67, from Morris Moskowitz.

Soft, supple leather belts can be rolled up and used as stocking stuffers or even to tie up a medium-sized box holding some other item of apparel. The sash variety from MM is sleek leather with golden stirrups at both ends, $24. Gold trim, incidentally is big news on everything this year. Or choose Calvin Klein's (another designer setting his hand to accessories) suede tie belts with little gold bead edging, $21. He also does dainty braided cord slivers with front clasp closings, $8 in many colors.

SHEEPSKIN IS always a winter favorite and if you know her shoe size, surprise her with a little sheepskin lined suede clog on a wood platform from Nina. In black, navy and assorted brown tones, $32. She can wear her nifty clog at home or venture outside in a shearling coat designed by Oscar de La Renta for Ledaspain Gropper Leathers. The A-line topper with suede outside and natural fur inside fits the body like a glove, and Tuscany lamb collar, hem and cuffs add luxury, in neutral beige, $350.

De La Renta also has done a new collection of romantic blouses for Ship 'N Shore. In jewel-like tones and delicate pastel shadings with Eastern influence, it's impossible to describe only one. The collection is made up of 100 per cent polyester fabrics such as machine washable Qiana, Palace crepe and Honan silk-look-alikes. Rounded collars, scalloped edges, deep ruffles, shirred yokes and string ties raise the craft of blouse-making to an art form. You'll find it hard to settle on only one at $25 to $55. Take lapis or garnet or malachite or . . .

Fashion, beauty tips

Textured stockings look fine with short or rugged sport boots, but regular pantyhose just doesn't work with them.

To get rid of rough, dead skin try using a loofah sponge while bathing, but use it gently on areas close to the bone.

Two sweaters are fine, so long as the longer one goes on top.

Shawls the latest gift wrapping

by JACKIE LANDSBERG

Remember when the little match girl shivered on a street corner in a tattered shawl? Times have changed.

Today it's the fashion cognoscenti who are collecting shawls much in the way the rich horde big diamonds.

So why not add another shawl to her collection or start one? Three from Vera, the scarf lady, give you an idea of how they wrap up.

A BABY blanket plaid shawl with fringe looks like wool, but is 100 per cent acrylic. Perfect over slacks and a sweater in tan, mint or navy colorations, $14.

To highlight a dinner dress, a challis shawl with stripe center and border print is typical of the romantic, peasant trend. Black, camel or beige with multicolor stripes, $12.

For even more elegant moments, hand-crocheted silk-like rayon cord in an open weave with long, lush 12-inch fringe is $65. In white or black, it looks like a million.

Jewelry is another accessory that is always welcome at Christmas (or anytime, for that matter). But if Tiffany's won't give you credit, don't fret. Monet offers the understated but significant look of necklace, bar pin and earrings in classic love knot design. In silver or gold plate for $8.50, $6 and $7.50. That means you can afford all three and still splurge on gift wrap.

Winter handbags go big and small. By day, the bigger the better. Take Anne Klein & Co.'s horse's oats feed bag style in buttery tan and taupe leathers for $75. Or a super-big body bag with open outer pocket from Morris Moskowitz, in assorted autumn leave shades, $125.

SHAWLS MAKE A smashing fashion accessory. Silk-like cord open weave, left, with 12-inch fringe is ideal for evening wear, about $65. Printed challis, center, is for daytime, about $12, while baby blanket plaid with fringe in acrylic look-alike wool tops sweater, coat or evening pants, about $14. All by Vera.

FOR EVENING the small bag that's still roomy enough to carry all those essentials comes in a bargello flame stitch or suede sherred and trimmed in gold kid with golden shoulder strap. The tapestry is $96,- the suede $67, from Morris Moskowitz.

Soft, supple leather belts can be rolled up and used as stocking stuffers or even to tie up a medium-sized box holding some other item of apparel. The sash variety from MM is sleek leather with golden stirrups at both ends, $24. Gold trim, incidentally is big news on everything this year. Or choose Calvin Klein's (another designer setting his hand to accessories) suede tie belts with little gold bead edging, $21. He also does dainty braided cord slivers with front clasp closings, $8 in many colors.

SHEEPSKIN IS always a winter favorite and if you know her shoe size, surprise her with a little sheepskin lined suede clog on a wood platform from Nina. In black, navy and assorted brown tones, $32. She can wear her nifty clog at home or venture outside in a shearling coat designed by Oscar de La Renta for Ledaspain Gropper Leathers. The A-line topper with suede outside and natural fur inside fits the body like a glove, and Tuscany lamb collar, hem and cuffs add luxury, in neutral beige, $350.

De La Renta also has done a new collection of romantic blouses for Ship 'N Shore. In jewel-like tones and delicate pastel shadings with Eastern influence, it's impossible to describe only one. The collection is made up of 100 per cent polyester fabrics such as machine washable Qiana, Palace crepe and Honan silk-look-alikes. Rounded collars, scalloped edges, deep ruffles, shirred yokes and string ties raise the craft of blouse-making to an art form. You'll find it hard to settle on only one at $25 to $55. Take lapis or garnet or malachite or . . .

Fashion, beauty tips

Textured stockings look fine with short or rugged sport boots, but regular pantyhose just doesn't work with them.

To get rid of rough, dead skin try using a loofah sponge while bathing, but use it gently on areas close to the bone.

Two sweaters are fine, so long as the longer one goes on top.

Double-breasted look in

The double-breasted suit has come into its own this season and is highly recommended for dress-up wear.

Various versions are being shown and one that gets our vote for flattering lines is the English influenced, long-roll, six-button style by Cricketeer. It features squared-off shoulders, higher arm holes, slightly nipped waist and modest flare to the jacket. A flapped ticket pocket adds a further British touch.

Dear Mr. Juster: My wife and I don't see eye-to-eye on a little sartorial matter. I'm fond of sport clothes and recently purchased a bright red-and-gold plaid vest to wear with my sports jacket. I am on the short and stocky side and she says all this color accentuates my middle. I'd like your opinion.—F. H.

I'm with your wife. This eye-catching accessory concentrates too much attention on your mid-section. Stay with more subdued sport vests as, in your case, it is much better not to present too bold a front.

Dear Mr. Juster: While shopping, I noticed some men's underwear shorts with an elastic, girdle-like band. As my husband has a large waistline, I felt this style would be helpful and bought some. To my surprise, he thinks they are ridiculous and won't even try a pair. This upset me and would like to hear your feelings about these shorts.—Mrs. G.L.B.

Tell him to stop knocking something he hasn't tried. Many men with a waist problem wear this type short, as it not only trims the waistline, but also is good for the posture. What's riduculous about wearing a garment that does that?

Dear Mr. Juster: At my firm's annual dinner recently, I wore a dark blue suit with faint chalk stripes, a white shirt, navy-and-silver tie, black shoes and socks. An office associate who is supposedly up on proper dress intimated that only plain, dark suits are worn to evening affairs such as this one. His remarks bothered me and I'm anxious to find out if he knows what he's talking about.—C.R.

Don't lose any sleep over this fellow's remarks. He's way off base. A softly striped dark suit is fine for dress-up wear. What's more, your entire outfit was well coordinated.

Make the new Saturday Herald a part of your weekend plans.

Lawrence E. Lamb

The doctor says

Drugs may be helpful in cholesterol control

I have been on a cholesterol-restricted diet for about a year, but my cholesterol is still 274 and my triglyceride count is 360. I am 70 years old. I am not overweight.

I eat no lunch meats of any kind, eat only meat with the fat removed three to four times a week, non-fat milk, corn oil margarine, but to no avail.

I do eat a slice of cheddar cheese each morning as I understand a person needs some cholesterol for the body.

A friend of mine takes Atromid-S. Do you think it would be advisable for me to take those capsules also — with a doctor's prescription, of course?

In patients who have followed faithfully a good dietary program and are not overweight, it is sometimes helpful to use medicines to control the triglyceride and cholesterol levels. Medicines should not be considered should not be considered as a substitute for sensible dietary management.

Altromid-S is one of the medicines that has been used. There are some new medicines that have been marketed in recent months that your doctor may want to try also.

The body can form its own cholesterol, even from sugar if need be. You don't need to eat any foods to provide some cholesterol for your body, it will make its own.

I have some questions about lie detector tests that I think you could answer.

My sister had an electrocardiogram that concerned her doctor, so he had another test done with very different results.

A young man I know tried three times to get into the Navy and couldn't pass the physical because his pressure shot way up. During the same time, he saw his own doctor several times, and his pressure was normal on all the visits.

Another young man wanting to prove his innocence on a criminal matter eagerly took the lie detector test, but to his dismay the results came out that he knew about or was implicated in the crime. The young man did not commit the crime but had suspicions as to who did.

Would not the lie detector test he took be the same as the variable results people experience with the electrocardiograms and blood pressure readings? Many people became excited or upset during any kind of test, and I cannot see how this stress test could be very accurate. I'd appreciate your comments.

At best, it is just a laboratory test, and laboratory tests of all types can be inaccurate for many reasons. The lie detector test depends upon changes in blood pressure, heart rate and a change in electrical resistance in the skin. All of these can and do respond to stress.

The value of the lie detector test depends a great deal on the experience of the person who gives and interprets the test. A person who is uptight because he is confronted for any reason should show this on the test even when the operator knows he is telling the truth.

Knowing the infinite capacity of human beings to err, I would think any lie detector test results could be challenged and often a second test with a second opinion from a different operator may be indicated.

Pre-freeze vegetables for later convenience

Dear Roberta: After they've been blanched and chilled in ice water, place green beans in a single layer on a cookie sheet or shallow pan, and put the pan and beans uncovered in the freezer. When they're frozen (in about an hour), package them in any kind of container and seal well. They won't stick together, so you'll be able to take out exactly the amount needed for one night's dinner. The same method works well for peas and corn.—Madge Uhler.

"Pre-freezing" on a tray or a foil works well for hamburgers, too. After seasoning the meat, press into patties close together on the tray and freeze. Then stack in a plastic bag and tie tightly. You'll not disturb the others when you reach in for just one burger.

Dear Roberta: We like to spread Christmas decorations around the house, instead of putting them all on the tree. A cluster of five or six similar ornaments looks especially cheery when hung by slender velvet ribbons above doorways. Hang them high enough so Santa can't bump them with his head.—Vivian Sweetman

What a good way to display the wooden, paper and plastic ornaments that fire departments warn us are a fine hazard if hung on Christmas.

Dear Roberta: When you disassemble a piece of equipment or furniture (such as a crib) that comes with screws or other hardware, you won't lose those small metal parts if you take these precautions. Put them in a plastic sandwich bag, tape it shut and then tape the whole package to a main part of the equipment itself.—Mrs. S. Avery

(Mrs. Mathews welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of The Daily Herald, P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

And a 'Whole Kids Catalog' of fun

Some top-rate toys for the kids

by JUDITH HELMUND

It's that time of year again! And this year the toy manufacturers are blessed with "Star Wars" characters and situations to add to the bionic wonders of past seasons.

In a search for toys suitable for 3- to 7-year-olds we found a number worthy of mention. Criteria included:

- Safety and durability.
- Some degree of creativity.
- Avoidance of sex stereotypes.

Of the many delightful toys that meet these standards, here are a few:

• Creative Playthings is a reliable producer of excellent toys. Among the puzzles we would recommend are their "mini-puzzles." Small and with only a few pieces, they come in a box that also holds a plastic tray in which to assemble them. Not as durable as some, but well worth their $2.50 price tag. Wooden community helper puzzles are stackable and interchangeable.

• Building toys are always favorites. Among the best are the Lego blocks, which have earned their popularity by remaining consistently excellent in quality, while adding new and different features. PreSchool Lego presents the same good quality in a more manageable size for little fingers. Wheel toys, regular blocks, transparent blocks for windows — and much more. There's also a book of ideas for things to make from Lego blocks ($1). Prices for the blocks are from $1.95 to $14.95 for a good-sized set.

• Playskool has "Bristle Blocks" for the younger set. They're soft and brightly colored, come in a variety of shapes and sizes and are easy to fit together. They are priced at about $10. A set of sturdy wooden unit blocks, most easily available from school supply houses, are a lasting and creative toy.

• To use with blocks or alone there are some excellent wheel toys. The ever-popular Mattel "Hot Wheels" remain fine and sturdy; they come with carrying case in large and small sizes. The Fisher Price diggers and dump trucks are expensive (around $12) but well worth it. They are made of sturdy plastic and won't crack, peel or rust; they can be left outside and washed off if they get muddy. Smaller toys made of wood and plastic, but very durable, are the Mattel "Putt Putts." They come in a wide variety of cars, trucks, and service vehicles.

• Play sets, including buildings, cars, trucks and people are very popular just now. There are Schaper sets including cowboys and Indians, a firehouse and a marvelous construction set. These are quite sturdy, though they do have many small accessory pieces that make them more suitable for 6- and 7-year-olds. Younger children will enjoy the $6 to $10 Fisher Price sets — a lift and load depot, a Sesame Street clubhouse, and a Play Family Village with stores, a fire station, a gas station and a barber shop. The small sets are about $12 and the village $20.

• Dolls and cuddly toys are always popular gifts, and there seems to be a trend toward more realistic dolls. The Madame Alexander dolls are beautifully constructed and range in price from $10 for a baby to $27 for a 16-inch doll. Sasha dolls are realistic and sturdy as well. Fisher Price has a variety of character dolls with plastic heads and cloth bodies. Softina is a small soft, very realistic doll, made by Goldberger; she costs $4.99. Horseman's ByeLo Baby, Lil Ruth and Baby's First Baby are all reasonably priced and quite realistic.

• Tops in the cuddly toy list, both for construction and sheer whimsy, are the Possum Trot toys. They make delightful puppets as well.

• And from a cottage industry run by Candy and John Tapert (with advice from their three toy-age children) out in the old California logging town of Eureka, come some charming and guaranteed safe SOFTMOBILES, including a 15-inch moving van ($10 each, plus $1 shipping and handling, The Garden, Eureka, Calif. 95501).

• Don't forget the old stand-bys — crayons, modeling materials, colored markers and such. For variety, splurge on some Fimo modeling compound; it comes in incredible colors (at rather incredible prices), and can be baked in the oven. Stencils made by Magneto are fun too; they are made of plastic and there are animals, fish and a variety of other designs.

• In your shopping, you might check various art and science museum shops and craft fairs in seeking the unusual and creative toys.

• Guidelines regarding safety, sexism, racism, age appropriateness, TV's influence and other toy concerns may be obtained for $1 from the consumer group, Public Action Coalition on Toys (PACT, 38 W. 9th St., New York, N.Y. 10011). The pamphlet title is "Guidelines on Choosing Toys for Children."

"The Second Whole Kids Catalog," Created by Peter Cardozo; Designed by Ted Menton. (New York: Bantam Books, $7.50;

Too often "second" books are a disappointment, a good idea stretched a little too far. Such is certainly not the case with the "Second Whole Kids Catalog." It's chockful of fascinating ideas and information, projects to do, games and goodies to send for, many of them free.

There are art and craft projects — Play Dough, posters and printing. There are glorious pictures to color of plants, animals, soldiers, Indians and ships as well. There are wonderful things to send for — and while you're waiting for them to come, keep yourself busy building, stitching, or cooking. Or you might make a movie, produce an old-time radio play.

Learn to do magic tricks — the most magic of all, perhaps, being how to entertain yourself on a rainy day. There are mazes galore and an opportunity for more — puzzles, riddles and brain teasers.

For outdoor fun, there's information on skateboarding, archery, cowboy roping and jogging. Don't forget street games, bicycling, swimming, backpacking, judo, motorcycling, and sailing, canoeing and soccer. Breathless? Relax on the beach doing sand sculpture, making a shell mobile or some shell jewelry.

Like its predecessor, this super book has come along just in time for the holidays and I can't think of a better "idea book" for parents searching for the right gift, nor a better book to give for hours of fun. A terrific holiday bargain whichever need it fills.

Keep kids' educational toys simple

WESTLAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Many highly touted "educational" toys really don't educate, a Purdue University professor says.

"Parents shouldn't let themselves be swayed by the television gimmicks," said Loretta M. Hatfield, head teacher and assistant director of the Child Development Laboratories in the School of Consumer and Family Sciences.

"It's time to go back to the basic blocks, cardboard boxes and homemade puppets."

Ms. Hatfield said toys educate when they challenge children to think creatively, to reason or to advance their ability to solve problems.

Puzzles, peg boards and dominoes are good examples, she said.

A TOY is frustrating, not educational, she said, if it is beyond the child's ability or developmental stage.

For example, a 16-piece puzzle would be beyond comprehension for a or 3-year-old.

A puzzle map of the United States for a 3-year-old child would only frustrate the child, whereas a four-piece puzzle would not challenge a 5-year-old.

Expensive toys may not give children anything to do, Ms. Hatfield said.

"The turn-on doll that walks, blinks, drinks, etc., at the push of a button doesn't stimulate the child's imagination or ability. I'm anti battery operated mechanical toys."

As examples of toys that are very educational, she named building blocks, erector sets and Tinker Toys because they give children a chance to use their imagination and creativity.

"PARENTS SHOULD also select at least one toy or game the whole family will use or play together," she said. "It is an educational setting for the child, learning social skills at home."

Homemade toys bought at bazaars are more creative and stimulating to children, she said.

"And button collections help train the child to classify and sort."

She said simple things such as tires, spools, pots and pans also stimulate children's imagination.

In selecting toys, she urges consumers to ask themselves:

• Does the toy encourage cooperative play so the children may learn to share with others?

• Does it have flexibility so children may do different things with it?

She said good choices include toys that develop small-muscle coordination such as climbing apparatus, balls or bicycles, and toys that develop motor-coordination such as peg boards or lacing (sewing) cards.

Also, boxes that educate children to recognize various shapes; beads to string; magnetic alphabet cards; dominoes to teach concepts of mathematics; unit blocks that also develop the math concept, motor coordination and social sharing.

PARENTS SHOULD examine toys for durability, sound construction, appropriateness to the child's age level and appeal to the child, Ms. Hatfield said.

For children with physical handicaps, she suggested wooden puzzles with knobs on each puzzle piece for easier pickup.

She also reminds parents not to sex-stereotype children.

"It's all right for little boys to play house and even play with dolls. Likewise, it's OK for girls to do woodworking and to play with trucks. This is how young children try on the roles and learn what it means to be a man, a woman or a parent."

The doctor says

Drugs may be helpful in cholesterol control

I have been on a cholesterol-restricted diet for about a year, but my cholesterol is still 274 and my triglyceride count is 360. I am 70 years old. I am not overweight.

I eat no lunch meats of any kind, eat only meat with the fat removed three to four times a week, non-fat milk, corn oil margarine, but to no avail.

I do eat a slice of cheddar cheese each morning as I understand a person needs some cholesterol for the body.

A friend of mine takes Atromid-S. Do you think it would be advisable for me to take those capsules also — with a doctor's prescription, of course?

In patients who have followed faithfully a good dietary program and are not overweight, it is sometimes helpful to use medicines to control the triglyceride and cholesterol levels. Medicines should not be considered should not be considered as a substitute for sensible dietary management.

Altromid-S is one of the medicines that has been used. There are some new medicines that have been marketed in recent months that your doctor may want to try also.

The body can form its own cholesterol, even from sugar if need be. You don't need to eat any foods to provide some cholesterol for your body, it will make its own.

I have some questions about lie detector tests that I think you could answer.

My sister had an electrocardiogram that concerned her doctor, so he had another test done with very different results.

A young man I know tried three times to get into the Navy and couldn't pass the physical because his pressure shot way up. During the same time, he saw his own doctor several times, and his pressure was normal on all the visits.

Another young man wanting to prove his innocence on a criminal matter eagerly took the lie detector test, but to his dismay the results came out that he knew about or was implicated in the crime. The young man did not commit the crime but had suspicions as to who did.

Would not the lie detector test he took be the same as the variable results people experience with the electrocardiograms and blood pressure readings? Many people became excited or upset during any kind of test, and I cannot see how this stress test could be very accurate. I'd appreciate your comments.

At best, it is just a laboratory test, and laboratory tests of all types can be inaccurate for many reasons. The lie detector test depends upon changes in blood pressure, heart rate and a change in electrical resistance in the skin. All of these can and do respond to stress.

The value of the lie detector test depends a great deal on the experience of the person who gives and interprets the test. A person who is uptight because he is confronted for any reason should show this on the test even when the operator knows he is telling the truth.

Knowing the infinite capacity of human beings to err, I would think any lie detector test results could be challenged and often a second test with a second opinion from a different operator may be indicated.

Pre-freeze vegetables for later convenience

Dear Roberta: After they've been blanched and chilled in ice water, place green beans in a single layer on a cookie sheet or shallow pan, and put the pan and beans uncovered in the freezer. When they're frozen (in about an hour), package them in any kind of container and seal well. They won't stick together, so you'll be able to take out exactly the amount needed for one night's dinner. The same method works well for peas and corn.—Madge Uhler.

"Pre-freezing" on a tray or a foil works well for hamburgers, too. After seasoning the meat, press into patties close together on the tray and freeze. Then stack in a plastic bag and tie tightly. You'll not disturb the others when you reach in for just one burger.

Dear Roberta: We like to spread Christmas decorations around the house, instead of putting them all on the tree. A cluster of five or six similar ornaments looks especially cheery when hung by slender velvet ribbons above doorways. Hang them high enough so Santa can't bump them with his head.—Vivian Sweetman

What a good way to display the wooden, paper and plastic ornaments that fire departments warn us are a fine hazard if hung on Christmas.

Dear Roberta: When you disassemble a piece of equipment or furniture (such as a crib) that comes with screws or other hardware, you won't lose those small metal parts if you take these precautions. Put them in a plastic sandwich bag, tape it shut and then tape the whole package to a main part of the equipment itself.—Mrs. S. Avery

And a 'Whole Kids Catalog' of fun

Some top-rate toys for the kids

by JUDITH HELMUND

It's that time of year again! And this year the toy manufacturers are blessed with "Star Wars" characters and situations to add to the bionic wonders of past seasons.

In a search for toys suitable for 3- to 7-year-olds we found a number worthy of mention. Criteria included:

- Safety and durability.
- Some degree of creativity.
- Avoidance of sex stereotypes.

Of the many delightful toys that meet these standards, here are a few:

• Creative Playthings is a reliable producer of excellent toys. Among the puzzles we would recommend are their "mini-puzzles." Small and with only a few pieces, they come in a box that also holds a plastic tray in which to assemble them. Not as durable as some, but well worth their $2.50 price tag. Wooden community helper puzzles are stackable and interchangeable.

• Building toys are always favorites. Among the best are the Lego blocks, which have earned their popularity by remaining consistently excellent in quality, while adding new and different features. PreSchool Lego presents the same good quality in a more manageable size for little fingers. Wheel toys, regular blocks, transparent blocks for windows — and much more. There's also a book of ideas for things to make from Lego blocks ($1). Prices for the blocks are from $1.95 to $14.95 for a good-sized set.

• Playskool has "Bristle Blocks" for the younger set. They're soft and brightly colored, come in a variety of shapes and sizes and are easy to fit together. They are priced at about $10. A set of sturdy wooden unit blocks, most easily available from school supply houses, are a lasting and creative toy.

• To use with blocks or alone there are some excellent wheel toys. The ever-popular Mattel "Hot Wheels" remain fine and sturdy; they come with carrying case in large and small sizes. The Fisher Price diggers and dump trucks are expensive (around $12) but well worth it. They are made of sturdy plastic and won't crack, peel or rust; they can be left outside and washed off if they get muddy. Smaller toys made of wood and plastic, but very durable, are the Mattel "Putt Putts." They come in a wide variety of cars, trucks, and service vehicles.

Employment outlook improves for college graduates in 1978

NEW YORK (UPI) — Job opportunities for college graduates are improving for the second consecutive year, but the best and the brightest students are expected to be the target of 1977-78 hiring, the College Placement Council reported Monday.

Qualified minorities and women, particularly with technical or business backgrounds, should benefit from employers' efforts to satisfy affirmative action commitments, the annual CPC survey shows.

The nearly 600 employers responding to the survey indicated they expect selective hiring of new college graduates to rise 16 per cent this academic year above the 1976-77 level.

In the 1976-77 period, hiring of degree holders rose 18 per cent after two consecutive years of diminished job offers.

SPURRING EMPLOYERS' optimism about job prospects for graduates, 70 per cent of the respondents expect business conditions in their companies to improve in the first half of next year, while only 5 per cent anticipate a decline, the CPC said.

Competition for engineers and computer science majors should remain strong, but demand for business and accounting majors is starting to soften because of an increased supply of candidates.

The CPC said other nontechnical graduates will have to use imagination and integrity to find jobs.

Bolstering the brighter job outlook, the federal government expects to increase hiring substantially following a cutback last year. Job opportunities in the Civil Service merit system, which covers some 80 agencies, should rise 23 per cent for all fields surveyed by the CPC.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT is one of the largest employers of liberal arts graduates, the CPC said, but government representatives warned hiring needs are highly competitive.

In keeping with recent hiring patterns, engineering openings should show the largest over-all gain of 27 per cent at all degree levels, the survey found. Job slots for Ph.D. engineers are expected to soar 52 per cent over 1976-77 vacancies.

Opportunities in "sciences, math and other technical" categories are projected to rise 10 per cent, with the biggest increases at the master's and doctoral levels.

Business-related degrees should show only modest gains: 6 per cent at the bachelor's level and 9 per cent at the master's.

THE BUILDING MANUFACTURERS and construction category anticipates a 45 per cent rise in hiring for the biggest improvement in the 19 types of employment areas studied by the council. The automotive and mechanical equipment group is second, with a projected 29 per cent gain.

Only two areas predict a decrease in job openings for new college graduates.

Tie metals and metal products groups expect a 5 per cent decline in hiring and local and state government agencies anticipate a 14 per cent drop.

U.S. may move on seabed mining

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — As every child has discovered, sometimes the unexpected presents are the best. And the United States has just received one, wholly unintentionally, from that most improbable of Santa Clauses, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. As a result, we may at last begin unwrapping the vast mineral wonders of the deep.

Trudeau was not trying to do us any favors. Instead, he was attempting to follow the most impressive world economic example of the decade: the lesson of the oil-exporting nations that you can proceed with total selfishness and get away with it. Now Canada, which is the world's largest supplier of nickel, has come up with the idea of sponsoring a world nickel cartel.

TRUDEAU'S REASONING (publicly, of course, he spoke only of "stablilizing" prices and assuring Canadian employment) was impeccable except for one thing. It actually awakened some Americans to our vulnerability to a wide range of harmful actions if we continue to fail to boost own production of critical materials. As Rep. John Breaux, D-La., quickly noted, a Canadian-led nickel cartel "could bring the U.S. economy to its knees."

Now, the interesting fact about Breaux is that he happens to be chairman of the House subcommittee on oceanography. And at the bottom of the sea lies, it is thought, enough nickel (and cobalt and manganese) to make the U.S. not only self-sufficient in all these vital metals but, indeed, a net exporter of them by the year 2000.

Why, then, haven't we long since started to extract these metals and copper, too, from the seabeds? The answer can be found in a frighteningly typical argument with the so-called "third world."

Nearly a decade ago, the United Nations decided grandly that deep-sea resources are the "common heritage of mankind" and, come next March, negotiators from 162 nations will convene again in Geneva for another session of the interminable Law of the Sea Conference, designed to reach common agreement on how finally to get some benefits from that "heritage." If the "third world" countries prevail, the answer will be a grandiose international authority, which they of course would dominate and, predictably. disrupt.

IT'S ALL BECOME a bit much even for Elliot Richardson, the Carter Administration's dutiful negotiator at this stalemated conference. He told a joint hearing of the Senate energy and commerce committees that Congress should stop standing by and proceed with legislation that would start getting the mining under way. Trudeau's threat should be a further goad.

Meanwhile, the oceans of difference have again been revealed between those who have given up on the future, except for the conviction that governments must regulate it, and those who see undreamed-of possibilities beyond the next crest of the wave. For helping us focus on which side we're on, we owe Trudeau a cordial thankyou.

Business briefs

Purchases up 1.5% in November: U.S.

WASHINGTON — Consumer purchasing rose 1.5 per cent in November, the second healthy advance in a row, the Commerce Dept. reported Monday. Following on the heels of a revised 2.7 per cent October increase, the new retail spending statistics offer evidence consumers are showing enough confidence in the economy to spend their money instead of saving it.

Government economists consistently have maintained consumer spending is a key element to continued economic growth. Sales last month totaled $61.57 billion, seasonally adjusted, an increase of $937 million from the October level, the department said. November sales were 12.3 per cent higher than in the comparable month a year ago. Durable goods sales, including automobiles, gained 1.7 per cent while nondurable purchases climbed 1.5 per cent, the department said.

Japan export plan 'falls short'

Ambassador Robert Strauss Monday said the initial Japanese proposals to reduce a flood of Japanese exports blamed for unemployment and other economic problems in the United States fell short of U.S. expectations. Strauss said the United States has not fully reviewed the specific offers presented in Washington by Nobuhiko Ushiba, Japan's external economic affairs minister, but an initial review revealed they were not satisfactory. "On balance, we had a good first meeting . . . but the Japanese offers fell short of what I felt were minimum goals," Strauss said after his initial discussions with Ushiba. Greeting Ushiba, Vice President Walter Mondale had said it "is an important visit and we look forward to having these important discussions."

Publisher to revive Look

French publisher Daniel Filipacchi Monday said he planned to resume publication of Look magazine, which closed in 1971 for financial reasons. Filipacchi, who publishes Paris Match, the weekly picture news magazine and other major publications, said he was holding talks with various financial interests in a bid to form a company to run Look. Filipacchi said he hoped publication of Look would resume in the fall of 1978. He said the magazine would be published every second week as it had been before it closed.

Court holds Ford liable

The Illinois Supreme Court Monday ruled the Ford Motor Co. must pay for injuries caused by a gasoline tank design defect and sharply criticized the giant automaker for withholding test crash results. The case involved a 1966 Ford Fairlane 500 equipped with a so-called "flange-mounted tank" riveted to the trunk floor which serves as the roof of the tank.

The car was hit from behind and burst into flames, burning the occupants who otherwise were not hurt. They sued Ford on grounds their injuries resulted from a design defect in the gasoline tank.

Fuel improvements on RVs planned

The Transportation Dept. Monday proposed fuel economy improvements for 1980 and 1981 model year pickup trucks, vans and recreational vehicles such as jeeps. It said its proposals, which would add up to $160 to the price of each vehicle, would save 12 billion gallons of fuel. Joan Claybrook, head of the department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said more stringent standards are needed because so many people now make daily, private use of traditional commercial vehicles.

Snow tire supply 'plentiful'

Snow tires should be as plentiful as falling snowflakes this winter, the Tire Industry Safety Council reports. Industry experts predict tire dealers around the country will have about 14 million snow tires this winter.

Telephone charges dropped

Central Telephone Co. of Illinois, under a tariff that took effect Dec. 1, dropped its monthly charge for telephone extensions to customers who choose to purchase their equipment. Under the new rate structure, approved by the Illinois Commerce Commission, the monthly charge of $1.15 per touch-call (pushbutton) extension and 90 cents per rotary (dial) extension will not be charged to customers who own their extensions. Customers, however, will continue to be charged for main station telephone service regardless of whether they own the equipment.

Dow up 0.52 as stocks stalled by power woes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks scored a modest gain Monday in trading sessions held up for 25 minutes because of computer problems at the New York and American Stock exchanges.

Analysts said the market generally was being buffeted by year-end selling for tax-loss purposes and by bargain hunting among the some of the stocks that have been hardest hit this year.

The Dow Jones industrial average, an 8.32-point winner Friday, rose 0.52 point to 815.75. The closely watched average, which lost 8.75 points overall last week, had been ahead two points at one time.

In the news background, the Commerce Dept. reported November's retail sales rose 1.5 per cent and that October's revised figures showed a 2.7 per cent increase instead of 1.8 per cent.

Against this background, the NYSE common stock index rose 0.01 to 51.73 and the average price of a share added one cent.

Advances topped declines, 708 to 687, among the 1,906 issues crossing the composite tape at 3 p.m.

Big board volume totaled 18,180,000 shares, down from the 19,210,000 traded Friday. Trading was halted from 12:35 p.m. to 1 p.m. because of power problems that affected computers at both the NYSE and AMEX.

Employment outlook improves for college graduates in 1978

NEW YORK (UPI) — Job opportunities for college graduates are improving for the second consecutive year, but the best and the brightest students are expected to be the target of 1977-78 hiring, the College Placement Council reported Monday.

Qualified minorities and women, particularly with technical or business backgrounds, should benefit from employers' efforts to satisfy affirmative action commitments, the annual CPC survey shows.

The nearly 600 employers responding to the survey indicated they expect selective hiring of new college graduates to rise 16 per cent this academic year above the 1976-77 level.

In the 1976-77 period, hiring of degree holders rose 18 per cent after two consecutive years of diminished job offers.

SPURRING EMPLOYERS' optimism about job prospects for graduates, 70 per cent of the respondents expect business conditions in their companies to improve in the first half of next year, while only 5 per cent anticipate a decline, the CPC said.

Competition for engineers and computer science majors should remain strong, but demand for business and accounting majors is starting to soften because of an increased supply of candidates.

The CPC said other nontechnical graduates will have to use imagination and integrity to find jobs.

Bolstering the brighter job outlook, the federal government expects to increase hiring substantially following a cutback last year. Job opportunities in the Civil Service merit system, which covers some 80 agencies, should rise 23 per cent for all fields surveyed by the CPC.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT is one of the largest employers of liberal arts graduates, the CPC said, but government representatives warned hiring needs are highly competitive.

In keeping with recent hiring patterns, engineering openings should show the largest over-all gain of 27 per cent at all degree levels, the survey found. Job slots for Ph.D. engineers are expected to soar 52 per cent over 1976-77 vacancies.

Opportunities in "sciences, math and other technical" categories are projected to rise 10 per cent, with the biggest increases at the master's and doctoral levels.

Business-related degrees should show only modest gains: 6 per cent at the bachelor's level and 9 per cent at the master's.

THE BUILDING MANUFACTURERS and construction category anticipates a 45 per cent rise in hiring for the biggest improvement in the 19 types of employment areas studied by the council. The automotive and mechanical equipment group is second, with a projected 29 per cent gain.

Only two areas predict a decrease in job openings for new college graduates.

Tie metals and metal products groups expect a 5 per cent decline in hiring and local and state government agencies anticipate a 14 per cent drop.

U.S. may move on seabed mining

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — As every child has discovered, sometimes the unexpected presents are the best. And the United States has just received one, wholly unintentionally, from that most improbable of Santa Clauses, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. As a result, we may at last begin unwrapping the vast mineral wonders of the deep.

Trudeau was not trying to do us any favors. Instead, he was attempting to follow the most impressive world economic example of the decade: the lesson of the oil-exporting nations that you can proceed with total selfishness and get away with it. Now Canada, which is the world's largest supplier of nickel, has come up with the idea of sponsoring a world nickel cartel.

TRUDEAU'S REASONING (publicly, of course, he spoke only of "stablilizing" prices and assuring Canadian employment) was impeccable except for one thing. It actually awakened some Americans to our vulnerability to a wide range of harmful actions if we continue to fail to boost own production of critical materials. As Rep. John Breaux, D-La., quickly noted, a Canadian-led nickel cartel "could bring the U.S. economy to its knees."

Now, the interesting fact about Breaux is that he happens to be chairman of the House subcommittee on oceanography. And at the bottom of the sea lies, it is thought, enough nickel (and cobalt and manganese) to make the U.S. not only self-sufficient in all these vital metals but, indeed, a net exporter of them by the year 2000.

Why, then, haven't we long since started to extract these metals and copper, too, from the seabeds? The answer can be found in a frighteningly typical argument with the so-called "third world."

Nearly a decade ago, the United Nations decided grandly that deep-sea resources are the "common heritage of mankind" and, come next March, negotiators from 162 nations will convene again in Geneva for another session of the interminable Law of the Sea Conference, designed to reach common agreement on how finally to get some benefits from that "heritage." If the "third world" countries prevail, the answer will be a grandiose international authority, which they of course would dominate and, predictably, disrupt.

IT'S ALL BECOME a bit much even for Elliot Richardson, the Carter Administration's dutiful negotiator at this stalemated conference. He told a joint hearing of the Senate energy and commerce committees that Congress should stop standing by and proceed with legislation that would start getting the mining under way. Trudeau's threat should be a further goad.

Meanwhile, the oceans of difference have again been revealed between those who have given up on the future, except for the conviction that governments must regulate it, and those who see undreamed-of possibilities beyond the next crest of the wave. For helping us focus on which side we're on, we owe Trudeau a cordial thankyou.

Purchases up 1.5% in November: U.S.

WASHINGTON — Consumer purchasing rose 1.5 per cent in November, the second healthy advance in a row, the Commerce Dept. reported Monday. Following on the heels of a revised 2.7 per cent October increase, the new retail spending statistics offer evidence consumers are showing enough confidence in the economy to spend their money instead of saving it.

Government economists consistently have maintained consumer spending is a key element to continued economic growth. Sales last month totaled $61.57 billion, seasonally adjusted, an increase of $937 million from the October level, the department said. November sales were 12.3 per cent higher than in the comparable month a year ago. Durable goods sales, including automobiles, gained 1.7 per cent while nondurable purchases climbed 1.5 per cent, the department said.

Japan export plan 'falls short'

Ambassador Robert Strauss Monday said the initial Japanese proposals to reduce a flood of Japanese exports blamed for unemployment and other economic problems in the United States fell short of U.S. expectations. Strauss said the United States has not fully reviewed the specific offers presented in Washington by Nobuhiko Ushiba, Japan's external economic affairs minister, but an initial review revealed they were not satisfactory. "On balance, we had a good first meeting . . . but the Japanese offers fell short of what I felt were minimum goals," Strauss said after his initial discussions with Ushiba. Greeting Ushiba, Vice President Walter Mondale had said it "is an important visit and we look forward to having these important discussions."

Publisher to revive Look

French publisher Daniel Filipacchi Monday said he planned to resume publication of Look magazine, which closed in 1971 for financial reasons. Filipacchi, who publishes Paris Match, the weekly picture news magazine and other major publications, said he was holding talks with various financial interests in a bid to form a company to run Look. Filipacchi said he hoped publication of Look would resume in the fall of 1978. He said the magazine would be published every second week as it had been before it closed.

Court holds Ford liable

The Illinois Supreme Court Monday ruled the Ford Motor Co. must pay for injuries caused by a gasoline tank design defect and sharply criticized the giant automaker for withholding test crash results. The case involved a 1966 Ford Fairlane 500 equipped with a so-called "flange-mounted tank" riveted to the trunk floor which serves as the roof of the tank.

The car was hit from behind and burst into flames, burning the occupants who otherwise were not hurt. They sued Ford on grounds their injuries resulted from a design defect in the gasoline tank.

Fuel improvements on RVs planned

The Transportation Dept. Monday proposed fuel economy improvements for 1980 and 1981 model year pickup trucks, vans and recreational vehicles such as jeeps. It said its proposals, which would add up to $160 to the price of each vehicle, would save 12 billion gallons of fuel. Joan Claybrook, head of the department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said more stringent standards are needed because so many people now make daily, private use of traditional commercial vehicles.

Snow tire supply 'plentiful'

Snow tires should be as plentiful as falling snowflakes this winter, the Tire Industry Safety Council reports. Industry experts predict tire dealers around the country will have about 14 million snow tires this winter.

Telephone charges dropped

Central Telephone Co. of Illinois, under a tariff that took effect Dec. 1, dropped its monthly charge for telephone extensions to customers who choose to purchase their equipment. Under the new rate structure, approved by the Illinois Commerce Commission, the monthly charge of $1.15 per touch-call (pushbutton) extension and 90 cents per rotary (dial) extension will not be charged to customers who own their extensions. Customers, however, will continue to be charged for main station telephone service regardless of whether they own the equipment.

CECILIA MORRISON says she's going to quit her job now that she has won the $500 first prize in "What I like about the Daily Herald" contest. She says her favorite section of the paper is Suburban Living because it provides information on meetings and bazaars.

Woman to quit with $500 prize

"I'm going to quit my job."

That was Cecilia Morrison's first reaction to learning she is the winner of the $500 first prize in "What I Like About the Daily Herald" contest.

Her voice bubbling with excitement, Cecilia explained "I have been working for three weeks now at Sears in Woodfield to earn some extra money for Christmas. Do you know what a madhouse that place is? I'm going to quit right away. We can really use the money. It looked like Christmas was going to be lean. This is great."

Cecilia, husband George and 2-year-old son Matthew moved into their new home, 111 E. Wallace, Bartlett, a year ago.

"I really like The Daily Herald," she added, "we're new to this area and it gives us all the news. I wrote (on the entry) I liked the Suburban Living section best because I can find out about meetings and bazaars and things like that."

Stella Szyszka, 2011 Narcissus, Hanover Park, won the $250 second place prize. A $100 third place prize was won by Dorothy Mysliwiec, 625 Pleasant Pl., Streamwood.

Disabled child gets special program

One out of 100 children is born disabled.

The handicap may be physical or mental, hidden or painfully obvious.

Diagnosing the disabled child's problem and deciding upon a course of treatment or therapy is an emotional trial for parents and children alike. Many times they must bounce from one specialist to another in search of answers.

IN RESPONSE to a need for comprehensive diagnosis of the needs and abilities of the disabled child, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, in cooperation with the Illinois Elk Crippled Children Commission, has begun a pilot program that will evaluate about 15 handicapped children from the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

If the multi-disciplinary approach that the hospital has planned proves successful, area physicians and social agencies will be able to refer children up to the age of 10 years to Alexian Brothers for a free diagnostic evaluation.

A team of social worker, occupational, physical, recreational and speech therapists, psychologist and physician-psychiatrist with experience in disability will look at all sides of the child's physical, emotional and social problems, says Brian Holden, divisional director for professional services at the hospital.

"What has happened in many instances is that the child and parents have seen a variety of people over the years. But a total evaluation of the child's disability and potential is lacking. That is why we are bringing together, in one place, the full range of professional services," says Holden.

THE PROGRAM begins with an extensive interview of the family by a social worker.

Then there is a medical evaluation of the child, including any laboratory tests, hearing, vision, heart and orthopedic examinations that are necessary to determine the physical condition of the child.

The intellectual future of the child is evaluated. Is he retarded? Or afflicted with a learning disability? What is his educational potential?

At the conclusion of the physical, mental and psychological examinations, the family and medical specialists strive to come up with a program of treatment, or therapy and education that will encourage the disabled child to develop to his full potential, Holden says.

"The program with the Northwest Special Education Organization is a pilot study to see if we've set things up correctly and can meet their needs," he says.

THE DISABLED child center at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago is a model for the Alexian Brothers program, Holden says.

Robert Steinhour, director of the Illinois Elks Crippled Children Commission, which has underwritten the cost of the dysfunctioning child program at Alexian Brothers, says the Elks clubs have a tradition of helping disabled children.

"It dates back to the polio days when we decided that one of our goals whould be to help take care of handicapped children," he says.

Elks lodges in Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Chicago are bearing most of the financial responsibility for the program, Steinhour says.

For more information on the disabled child program, persons may call Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 437-5500, ext. 682.

CECILIA MORRISON says she's going to quit her job now that she has won the $500 first prize in "What I like about the Daily Herald" contest. She says her favorite section of the paper is Suburban Living because it provides information on meetings and bazaars.

Woman to quit with $500 prize

"I'm going to quit my job."

That was Cecilia Morrison's first reaction to learning she is the winner of the $500 first prize in "What I Like About the Daily Herald" contest.

Her voice bubbling with excitement, Cecilia explained "I have been working for three weeks now at Sears in Woodfield to earn some extra money for Christmas. Do you know what a madhouse that place is? I'm going to quit right away. We can really use the money. It looked like Christmas was going to be lean. This is great."

Cecilia, husband George and 2-year-old son Matthew moved into their new home, 111 E. Wallace, Bartlett, a year ago.

"I really like The Daily Herald," she added, "we're new to this area and it gives us all the news. I wrote (on the entry) I liked the Suburban Living section best because I can find out about meetings and bazaars and things like that."

Stella Szyszka, 2011 Narcissus, Hanover Park, won the $250 second place prize. A $100 third place prize was won by Dorothy Mysliwiec, 625 Pleasant Pl., Streamwood.

Disabled child gets special program

One out of 100 children is born disabled.

The handicap may be physical or mental, hidden or painfully obvious.

Diagnosing the disabled child's problem and deciding upon a course of treatment or therapy is an emotional trial for parents and children alike. Many times they must bounce from one specialist to another in search of answers.

IN RESPONSE to a need for comprehensive diagnosis of the needs and abilities of the disabled child, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, in cooperation with the Illinois Elk Crippled Children Commission, has begun a pilot program that will evaluate about 15 handicapped children from the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

If the multi-disciplinary approach that the hospital has planned proves successful, area physicians and social agencies will be able to refer children up to the age of 10 years to Alexian Brothers for a free diagnostic evaluation.

A team of social worker, occupational, physical, recreational and speech therapists, psychologist and physician-psychiatrist with experience in disability will look at all sides of the child's physical, emotional and social problems, says Brian Holden, divisional director for professional services at the hospital.

"What has happened in many instances is that the child and parents have seen a variety of people over the years. But a total evaluation of the child's disability and potential is lacking. That is why we are bringing together, in one place, the full range of professional services," says Holden.

THE PROGRAM begins with an extensive interview of the family by a social worker.

Then there is a medical evaluation of the child, including any laboratory tests, hearing, vision, heart and orthopedic examinations that are necessary to determine the physical condition of the child.

The intellectual future of the child is evaluated. Is he retarded? Or afflicted with a learning disability? What is his educational potential?

At the conclusion of the physical, mental and psychological examinations, the family and medical specialists strive to come up with a program of treatment, or therapy and education that will encourage the disabled child to develop to his full potential, Holden says.

"The program with the Northwest Special Education Organization is a pilot study to see if we've set things up correctly and can meet their needs," he says.

THE DISABLED child center at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago is a model for the Alexian Brothers program, Holden says.

Robert Steinhour, director of the Illinois Elks Crippled Children Commission, which has underwritten the cost of the dysfunctioning child program at Alexian Brothers, says the Elks clubs have a tradition of helping disabled children.

"It dates back to the polio days when we decided that one of our goals whould be to help take care of handicapped children," he says.

Elks lodges in Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Chicago are bearing most of the financial responsibility for the program, Steinhour says.

For more information on the disabled child program, persons may call Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 437-5500, ext. 682.

Dummy entry is puzzler

South leads the deuce of diamonds from dummy at trick two. East ducks and South rises with the king. How should he continue?

He is a trifle too high. Twelve points opposite 12 is usually not enough for game, but South is there and wants to make it.

If he has seen an enemy hand he can bring the contract in by playing his nine of diamonds, but he isn't clairvoyant nor does he have X-ray eyes. Therefore he decides to enter dummy to lead a second diamond. Which way should he enter dummy?

Most players will lead to dummy's king of hearts to retain control of all suits and most of that group will see East rise with the ace of diamonds and lead the king of clubs. Dummy's last entry will be knocked out and there will be no way to bring in the diamond suit.

The best line of play is to enter dummy with the ace of clubs. East gets in and cashes three clubs but South will take the rest of the tricks.

Ask Andy

Hindu-Arabic numeration far superior

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Gordon Elder, 12, of Lansing Mich., for his question:

HOW DID NUMBERS GET START-ED?

Our numeration system is rather simple. It has only 10 basic numerals which are called digits. They are the number 1 through 9 and also the zero. These 10 symbols can represent any number. The system is called decimal because it is based on 10. The word comes from the Latin "decem," which means 10.

Numbers are actually ideas. We cannot really see or touch them. Numeral systems are ways of counting and naming numbers.

Earliest man probably had several ways of recording the few numbers he needed. He could have kept a collection of pebbles to represent the number of sheep in his flock. Each pebble could stand for one sheep, and by matching pebbles against the flock, he would be able to tell if he had all of his sheep.

He probably then devised a way of recording the number of his various possessions. Knots tied in leather thongs and scratched tally marks on rock walls could have been two different ways by which he could keep a count of his items.

It wasn't long until man was able to come up with words to represent his numbers. Primitive man used the word "wings" to mean two objects. If he wanted to refer to four things, he used the name of a fruit that was known to grow in clusters of four, and "hand" came to be the indication for five items. These number-names were found in most of the primitive languages.

Next man began to count. He could say all the words which represented the various numbers in order. Soon persons in many parts of the world developed various counting systems. Some were based on units of five, others on 10, 12 or 60. We still have such measures as 12 inches in one foot and 60 seconds in one minute and 60 minutes in one hour.

Many early systems repeated basic symbols and added their values to get the numbers they wanted. This was the case with the Egyptian, Greek and Roman numeral systems.

The Hindus devised a system that turned out to be far superior to almost all the others. It used the principle of place value and also a symbol that meant "not any." This system became the decimal numeral system, which is now used in most parts of the world.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Gwendolyn Williams, 12, of Ephrata, Pa., for her question:

WHERE DO WE GET SESAME SEEDS?

Sesame is an herb that is grown in tropical countries and is used mainly for the oil that is obtained from the plant's seeds.

Originally grown in Japan, China and India, the plant has been cultivated successfully in both Mexico and in the southern part of the United States.

Sesame plants grow about 2 feet high. The annual plant has oblong leaves and tiny flowers that are pink or white, depending on the species. Small capsules contain flat seeds that range from white to brown in color.

Oil obtained from sesame seeds is straw-colored and is similar to olive oil. It is used in salad dressings and cooking. The seeds add flavor to bread, biscuits and even candy.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 13.

Today on TV

Diane Mermigas/TV-radio critic

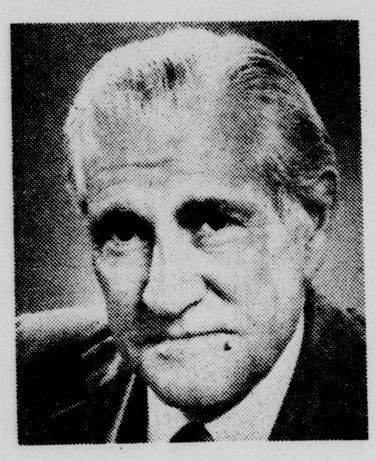
Sevareid is TV's guest tonight

He has been called an oracle and many have said Eric Sevareid is what God would look and sound like if he appeared in the flesh with a press card in one hand and a pencil in the other.

But the former CBS news correspondent, famed for always maintaining a sensitivity to all sides of an issue, would be able to rationalize that widespread impression of him.

After all, he has admitted, "I am cursed with a somewhat forbidding Scandinavian manner, with a restraint that spells stuffiness to a lot of people."

However, it is not the shy and aloof Sevareid that viewers will see and hear on the final segment of "A Conversation with Eric Sevareid" today at 7 p.m. on Channel 2.



ERIC SEVAREID

SEVAREID IS SO comfortable in his hour-long reminiscence with CBS roving correspondent Charles Kuralt that he smiles, takes to chuckling once or twice and even refers to his head as "a kind of medium-sized wastebasket."

"There's quite a lot of stuff in there, but I have to rummage around for it, there's no filing system," he says, discussing his 40 years as a television newsman. He spent 38 of those years with CBS "out of old-fashioned loyalty to the organization."

Kuralt listens attentively to the dean of television commentator's observations and memories in the tranquility of Sevareid's rustic vacation home in Virginia.

The scene is like that of a Golden Age forum where Greek elders deliberated the past and speculated on the future for the benefit of those younger and less experienced.

SEVAREID LIGHTLY dismisses his many years in television news saying, "I have gone the normal span of a man's working life, rather abnormal in this calling, and it's a happy surprise."

But, Sevareid is unique, not only for his unmistakable style and approach, but because he is one of America's first television commentators to survive the brunt of his career. He is one of the few of his breed not to have died or faded into oblivion prematurely. He leaves behind a thoughtful and rich example of what television commentary should and can be.

Sevareid calls journalists "jack-of-all-trades and masters of none" who would do a better job and have fewer nerve-related problems reporting the news every other day. He ardently champions objectivity and admits "the problem in Washington is not so much finding out what the news is — although occasionally it's a great problem. It's making sense of it."

THE OVERVIEW of Sevareid's career and feelings is studded with film clips and old photographs of his youthful days in Velva, N.D., his growth to journalistic maturity as a Washington newsman, his apprenticeship with the great Edward R. Murrow and his friendship with the likes of Walter Lippmann and Adlai Stevenson.

The show will prove fascinating even for the nonjournalist since Sevareid offers his personal footnotes on people and events out of recent history like Sen. Joseph McCarthy, Richard M. Nixon, the Battle of Britain and the Vietnam War.

But, this is hardly a sendoff for the 65-year-old Sevareid who, now that he's retired from the CBS commentator's desk, will be working on documentaries for the network including one based on his autobiography, "Not So Wild a Dream."

Slated to host a new series of 16 half-hour shows on American diplomacy between 1919 and 1941 called "Between the Wars" this is hardly the last we've heard of Sevareid. Mandatory retirement simply has forced him to find a new outlet for his brillant self-styled expression and integrity.

Sleaziness almost likeable in '1947'

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Jay Robert Nash writes like a man in love with his subject. This would be a great compliment if his target was wildflowers of the Canadian Rockies. Unfortunately, in "1947" Nash puts the pen to Al (Scarface) Capone, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel and George (Bugs) Moran.

This historically based drama premiered Friday at the Village Theatre, 1548 N. Clark St., just six blocks from the site of the St. Valentine's Day massacre. Reviewers were asked to forego the opening and see Sunday night's performance instead, as last week's blizzard prevented many of the props from arriving on time.

A moviehouse for the past 50 years, the Village Theatre has been refurbished extravagantly by a company formed to produce this and future Nash plays. Jerrie Lynne Productions has leased the building for one year. "1947" is scheduled to run through Feb. 5, with more Nash plays in the offing after that.

UNDOUBTEDLY NASH would be horrified at the suggestion he holds a secret admiration for thugs such as Capone, Siegel and Moran. A former U.S. intelligence agent, crime columnist and author of several books on crime, Nash always has sided with the law.

Far from it. Nash's first major play gives close portraits of each of these famous bad guys in the final, pathetic days before their separate deaths in 1947.

Act One features the paranoid ramblings of a syphillis-wracked Capone; Act Two gives us Bugsy Siegel, a self-indulgent swell who sees himself as a modern-day Moses leading his people to the promised land of Las Vegas; Act Three shows Bugs Moran in his cell, clutching a cross and cursing the warden.

EACH CRIMINAL IS portrayed as an evil kingpin who is getting just what he deserves. But in the end one is left liking these sleazy punks anyway, for their very sleaziness and for the smell of their money or former power.

Wallace expands and contracts as the role demands. His Moran is a diminutive Irishman, puffing and strutting like a stir-crazy Cagney; his Capone has mythic proportions: he lunges with all the charming horror of Frankenstein's monster.

Wallace gives these men such personality, and the wimps Nash surrounds them with are so bland, that we can't help cheering for them. It's the old Patty Hearst syndrome of identifying with our oppressors.

THE KEY TO Nash's true feelings is in the other main character in the play, a narrator-photographer who is visible only to the audience. Because he acts as both symbol of the public's ghoulish attraction to high criminals and as each criminal's subconscious — he often feeds them lines — he serves as a link that implicates us all.

Through the photographer, convincingly played by Mike Nussbaum, Nash accuses us all of what he himself is guilty of: deifying the very men we abhor.

'Chapter Two' funny, but flawed

by NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK — Theater people like to say that if the stage lighting is exactly right, the audience won't notice the lighting. By the same token, if a play is beautifully constructed, the audience won't think about the architecture of the plot, manipulation of characters or deft things that are done with words. They'll be too caught up in whatever the playwright is trying to share with them.

Of course there have to be exceptions, the most successful being Neil Simon, and the example conveniently at hand being his latest comedy, "Chapter Two."

Everybody cares deeply what is going to happen with two of the four characters: George (Judd Hirsch), recently widowed and grievously hurt by the death of his beloved wife; and Jennie (Anita Gillette), just divorced but too insecure to think even about dating, much less a lasting alliance.

SO CONCERN for them sustains the play through typically Simon generosity with comedy, and moments of genuine poignancy as well. Because we care for George and Jennie, we are entertained, empathic, touched, tickled and, finally, reassured. It makes for an exhilarating, enheartening evening in the theater.

Nevertheless, while all this is going on, the machinery of this new Simon comedy is as conspicuous as the structural steel, plumbing and wiring in a half-completed building. Just as a framework provides a fair idea of what the finished edifice will look like, Simon's plot structure makes the comedy's outcome practically certain within the first few minutes. The suspense lies not in what he is going to do with his people, but how he will do it.

For a starter, there is this set by William Ritman, which at first looks awfully precious and cluttered for a New York apartment until Tharon Musser's suitably subtle lighting reveals that it is two apartments: Jennie's on the east side of Manhattan and George's on the west. Only the two back-to-back settees revolve on a small turntable, but it is enough, with the lighting and action, to establish clearly what is happening where.

And once we see George and Jennie, we know beyond the shadow of a doubt that eventually they will meet, fall in love and find what they need in each other. They're just too nice not to, and besides, this is Neil Simon and not one of the tragic dramatists.

WE ALSO KNOW that once they discover each other, the playwright had better stir up some friction, or what would he do for a second act? And finally, of course, a last-minute making-up, with eternal love assured.

The prelude to their meeting is the best part, engineered by the two other characters, Leo (Cliff Gorman), George's brother, and Faye (Ann Wedgeworth), Jennie's friend. This could have been a thunderous cliche, but trust Simon to give it a fresh and credible touch, via a sparkling series of phone calls.

Their falling in love is funny and poignant at the same time, as each tries to come to terms with the present and past. Simon always is spoken of as a comic writer, which he certainly is, but he can write scenes of exquisite tenderness as well.

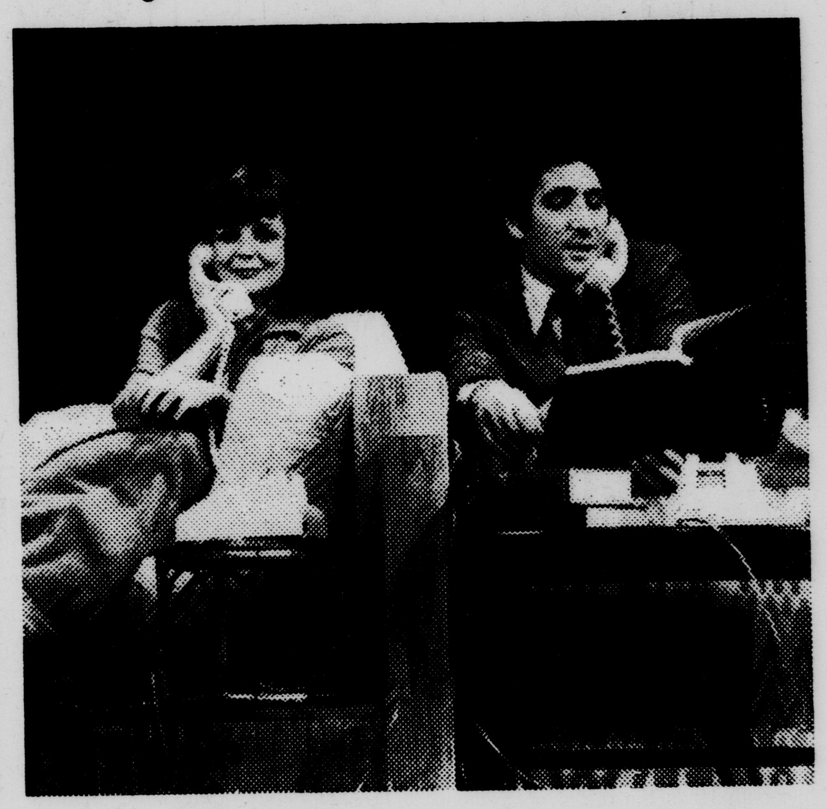
Only when anger and outrage are introduced between the two — generated less by the facts of their lives than by the need to whip up a second act — does the dramatic machinery begin to get in the way. George might well be haunted by memories of another honeymoon a dozen years ago, when he and Jennie are on theirs. Yet the change in him is too abrupt and not consistent with his previous attitude, especially in that he and Jennie obviously had been intimate before they married.

STILL, IT PROVIDES the contrasting elements of anger (Miss Gillette has a rousing mad scene), confusion (Hirsch) and reconciliation (both).

Because Simon has written, and Herbert Ross has directed, the roles of George and Jennie as real people the play is diminished by the fact that they have treated Leo and Faye — her in particular — more as caricatures. This doesn't imply harsh criticism of the two players, although Miss Wedgeworth might advantageously cut back on the fussy mannerisms. But their principal scene together — an attempted seduction — is too long and too silly for the good of the play. Pruning and restaging there could help, but in light of the almost certain success of "Chapter Two," it probably won't be changed.

No point in repeating some of the pricelessly funny lines; they never look as good in print anyway. But the dialogue often is hilarious, and for the most part, funny in a way that implements rather than impedes the story.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)



AUDIENCES ARE being entertained, touched and tickled by Judd Hirsch and Anita Gillette who play George and Jennie in Neil Simon's newest Broadway comedy, "Chapter Two."

Diane Mermigas/TV-radio critic

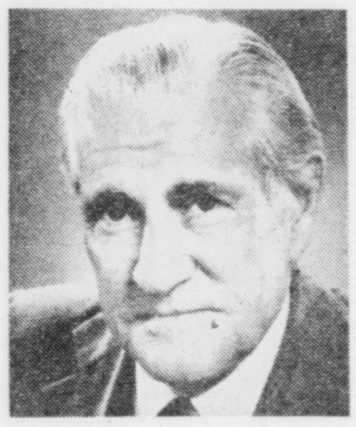
Sevareid is TV's guest tonight

He has been called an oracle and many have said Eric Sevareid is what God would look and sound like if he appeared in the flesh with a press card in one hand and a pencil in the other.

But the former CBS news correspondent, famed for always maintaining a sensitivity to all sides of an issue, would be able to rationalize that widespread impression of him.

After all, he has admitted, "I am cursed with a somewhat forbidding Scandinavian manner, with a restraint that spells stuffiness to a lot of people."

However, it is not the shy and aloof Sevareid that viewers will see and hear on the final segment of "A Conversation with Eric Sevareid" today at 7 p.m. on Channel 2.



ERIC SEVAREID

SEVAREID IS SO comfortable in his hour-long reminiscence with CBS roving correspondent Charles Kuralt that he smiles, takes to chuckling once or twice and even refers to his head as "a kind of medium-sized wastebasket."

"There's quite a lot of stuff in there, but I have to rummage around for it, there's no filing system," he says, discussing his 40 years as a television newsman. He spent 38 of those years with CBS "out of old-fashioned loyalty to the organization."

Kuralt listens attentively to the dean of television commentator's observations and memories in the tranquility of Sevareid's rustic vacation home in Virginia.

The scene is like that of a Golden Age forum where Greek elders deliberated the past and speculated on the future for the benefit of those younger and less experienced.

SEVAREID LIGHTLY dismisses his many years in television news saying, "I have gone the normal span of a man's working life, rather abnormal in this calling, and it's a happy surprise."

But, Sevareid is unique, not only for his unmistakable style and approach, but because he is one of America's first television commentators to survive the brunt of his career. He is one of the few of his breed not to have died or faded into oblivion prematurely. He leaves behind a thoughtful and rich example of what television commentary should and can be.

Sevareid calls journalists "jack-of-all-trades and masters of none" who would do a better job and have fewer nerve-related problems reporting the news every other day. He ardently champions objectivity and admits "the problem in Washington is not so much finding out what the news is — although occasionally it's a great problem. It's making sense of it."

THE OVERVIEW of Sevareid's career and feelings is studded with film clips and old photographs of his youthful days in Velva, N.D., his growth to journalistic maturity as a Washington newsman, his apprenticeship with the great Edward R. Murrow and his friendship with the likes of Walter Lippmann and Adlai Stevenson.

The show will prove fascinating even for the nonjournalist since Sevareid offers his personal footnotes on people and events out of recent history like Sen. Joseph McCarthy, Richard M. Nixon, the Battle of Britain and the Vietnam War.

But, this is hardly a sendoff for the 65-year-old Sevareid who, now that he's retired from the CBS commentator's desk, will be working on documentaries for the network including one based on his autobiography, "Not So Wild a Dream."

Slated to host a new series of 16 half-hour shows on American diplomacy between 1919 and 1941 called "Between the Wars" this is hardly the last we've heard of Sevareid. Mandatory retirement simply has forced him to find a new outlet for his brillant self-styled expression and integrity.

Sleaziness almost likeable in '1947'

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Jay Robert Nash writes like a man in love with his subject. This would be a great compliment if his target was wildflowers of the Canadian Rockies. Unfortunately, in "1947" Nash puts the pen to Al (Scarface) Capone, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel and George (Bugs) Moran.

This historically based drama premiered Friday at the Village Theatre, 1548 N. Clark St., just six blocks from the site of the St. Valentine's Day massacre. Reviewers were asked to forego the opening and see Sunday night's performance instead, as last week's blizzard prevented many of the props from arriving on time.

A moviehouse for the past 50 years, the Village Theatre has been refurbished extravagantly by a company formed to produce this and future Nash plays. Jerrie Lynne Productions has leased the building for one year. "1947" is scheduled to run through Feb. 5, with more Nash plays in the offing after that.

UNDOUBTEDLY NASH would be horrified at the suggestion he holds a secret admiration for thugs such as Capone, Siegel and Moran. A former U.S. intelligence agent, crime columnist and author of several books on crime, Nash always has sided with the law.

Moreover, the play itself hardly glorifies the men, nor does it try to whitewash their fabled crimes.

Far from it. Nash's first major play gives close portraits of each of these famous bad guys in the final, pathetic days before their separate deaths in 1947.

Act One features the paranoid ramblings of a syphillis-wracked Capone; Act Two gives us Bugsy Siegel, a self-indulgent swell who sees himself as a modern-day Moses leading his people to the promised land of Las Vegas; Act Three shows Bugs Moran in his cell, clutching a cross and cursing the warden.

EACH CRIMINAL IS portrayed as an evil kingpin who is getting just what he deserves. But in the end one is left liking these sleazy punks anyway, for their very sleaziness and for the smell of their money or former power.

Jack Wallace is partially to blame. This veteran Chicago actor plays all three roles with a range and power that is overwhelming.

Wallace expands and contracts as the role demands. His Moran is a diminutive Irishman, puffing and strutting like a stir-crazy Cagney; his Capone has mythic proportions: he lunges with all the charming horror of Frankenstein's monster.

Wallace gives these men such personality, and the wimps Nash surrounds them with are so bland, that we can't help cheering for them. It's the old Patty Hearst syndrome of identifying with our oppressors.

THE KEY TO Nash's true feelings is in the other main character in the play, a narrator-photographer who is visible only to the audience. Because he acts as both symbol of the public's ghoulish attraction to high criminals and as each criminal's subconscious — he often feeds them lines — he serves as a link that implicates us all.

Through the photographer, convincingly played by Mike Nussbaum, Nash accuses us all of what he himself is guilty of: deifying the very men we abhor.

Each scene is jammed with highly inventive dialogue of the sort Damon Runyon was famous for in his short stories. (Nash even calls a pistol a "Roscoe" on one occasion.)

And Wallace gives a tour de force performance that won't be forgotten soon. Nevertheless, "1947" is at root a highly moralistic play with a weak, and ultimately amoral impact.

'Chapter Two' funny, but flawed

by NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK — Theater people like to say that if the stage lighting is exactly right, the audience won't notice the lighting. By the same token, if a play is beautifully constructed, the audience won't think about the architecture of the plot, manipulation of characters or deft things that are done with words. They'll be too caught up in whatever the playwright is trying to share with them.

Of course there have to be exceptions, the most successful being Neil Simon, and the example conveniently at hand being his latest comedy, "Chapter Two."

Everybody cares deeply what is going to happen with two of the four characters: George (Judd Hirsch), recently widowed and grievously hurt by the death of his beloved wife; and Jennie (Anita Gillette), just divorced but too insecure to think even about dating, much less a lasting alliance.

SO CONCERN for them sustains the play through typically Simon generosity with comedy, and moments of genuine poignancy as well. Because we care for George and Jennie, we are entertained, empathic, touched, tickled and, finally, reassured. It makes for an exhilarating, enheartening evening in the theater.

Nevertheless, while all this is going on, the machinery of this new Simon comedy is as conspicuous as the structural steel, plumbing and wiring in a half-completed building. Just as a framework provides a fair idea of what the finished edifice will look like, Simon's plot structure makes the comedy's outcome practically certain within the first few minutes. The suspense lies not in what he is going to do with his people, but how he will do it.

For a starter, there is this set by William Ritman, which at first looks awfully precious and cluttered for a New York apartment until Tharon Musser's suitably subtle lighting reveals that it is two apartments: Jennie's on the east side of Manhattan and George's on the west. Only the two back-to-back settees revolve on a small turntable, but it is enough, with the lighting and action, to establish clearly what is happening where.

And once we see George and Jennie, we know beyond the shadow of a doubt that eventually they will meet, fall in love and find what they need in each other. They're just too nice not to, and besides, this is Neil Simon and not one of the tragic dramatists.

WE ALSO KNOW that once they discover each other, the playwright had better stir up some friction, or what would he do for a second act? And finally, of course, a last-minute making-up, with eternal love assured.

The prelude to their meeting is the best part, engineered by the two other characters, Leo (Cliff Gorman), George's brother, and Faye (Ann Wedgeworth), Jennie's friend. This could have been a thunderous cliche, but trust Simon to give it a fresh and credible touch, via a sparkling series of phone calls.

Their falling in love is funny and poignant at the same time, as each tries to come to terms with the present and past. Simon always is spoken of as a comic writer, which he certainly is, but he can write scenes of exquisite tenderness as well.

Only when anger and outrage are introduced between the two — generated less by the facts of their lives than by the need to whip up a second act — does the dramatic machinery begin to get in the way. George might well be haunted by memories of another honeymoon a dozen years ago, when he and Jennie are on theirs. Yet the change in him is too abrupt and not consistent with his previous attitude, especially in that he and Jennie obviously had been intimate before they married.

STILL, IT PROVIDES the contrasting elements of anger (Miss Gillette has a rousing mad scene), confusion (Hirsch) and reconciliation (both).

Because Simon has written, and Herbert Ross has directed, the roles of George and Jennie as real people the play is diminished by the fact that they have treated Leo and Faye — her in particular — more as caricatures. This doesn't imply harsh criticism of the two players, although Miss Wedgeworth might advantageously cut back on the fussy mannerisms. But their principal scene together — an attempted seduction — is too long and too silly for the good of the play. Pruning and restaging there could help, but in light of the almost certain success of "Chapter Two," it probably won't be changed.

No point in repeating some of the pricelessly funny lines; they never look as good in print anyway. But the dialogue often is hilarious, and for the most part, funny in a way that implements rather than impedes the story.

Bears are pretty good—could be better

by BOB GALLAS

Many point to the Bears' last-second 28-27 win over Kansas City as the turning point of the season. The team has not lost since, and now has won five in a row to knock at the door of the NFL playoffs.

But while that win over the Chiefs may have turned the tide, it hasn't convinced the Bears that they've become instant contenders.

"Pulling that Kansas City game out kept us alive," said head coach Jack Pardee. "But the defense certainly hadn't gotten it together then.

"WE WERE NOT a bad team one week and a good team the next."

The game with the Chiefs followed a 47-0 humiliation at the hands of Houston and that may have been the start of the Bears metamorphosis. It also put the Bears' record at 3-5 and forced them to stop thinking about the playoffs and begin thinking about playing one game at a time.

So far, the process is working.

"I think before the Houston game we'd play good one week and the next week we'd be down," said defensive tackle Ron Rydalch. "Now we've won five in a row, even though some weeks we haven't played so good. That's the mark of a winning team."

PART OF THE reason for the Bears five straight wins is the defense, which has allowed just two touchdowns in the last four games and has shown the beginning of a pass rush.

"Earlier in the year, with the condition of Wally Chambers being unknown and the shuffling of players around, things weren't as settled down as they have been the last seven or eight weeks," Rydalch said.

There are those who may argue that the Oakland Raiders or Dallas Cowboys are good enough to say they played just well enough to win, but that a team like the Bears, who have had the advantage of an easy schedule, may just be struggling enough to win.

Rydalch admits that the Bears don't claim to be the world beaters yet and are taking a little advantage of Lady Luck.

"I'M NOT SAYING we can be as good as we can be yet," Rydalch said. "We've got a long way to go. But we're starting to get the attitude we can compete."

The Bears will be aware, going into Sunday's game against the New York Giants, just what they need to gain a playoff spot. They may not even have to win.

The Washington Redskins play the Los Angeles Rams Saturday afternoon and the Minnesota Vikings play in Detroit Saturday night. If the Redskins lose, the Bears would be in the playoffs as the Wild Card team, no matter what they do Sunday. But Pardee said the Bears will be playing to win regardless.

"We'll go all out," Pardee said. "I'd rather go into the playoffs with a six-game winning streak."

PARDEE SAID the Bears will also put winning ahead of Walter Payton, who needs just 199 rushing yards to break O. J. Simpson's season record of 2,003 yards.

"His rushing record is immaterial," said Pardee. "I want him to get the record, but we'll do whatever it takes to win."

The Giants were ranked fourth in the NFC in defending against the rush going into last Sunday's game, a loss to the Eagles. If the Bears have to pass instead of run Sunday, Pardee said that's what they'll do.

"If that (passing) is what they'll give us, then that's what we'll take," Pardee said.

Here's the story on playoff tickets

Bears season ticket holders who were confused as to why they had to send in payment for two NFC playoff games now need only be half as confused.

Bears management announced Monday that season ticket holders now need only send in payment for a possible playoff game in Chicago, which would be Jan. 1.

The chance of a first-round playoff game being played in Chicago was eliminated Sunday when Los Angeles beat Atlanta. In order for the Bears to host a first round playoff game, the Rams would have had to lose their final two games.

ALL CHANCES for a playoff game in Chicago, of course, still count on the Bears making it. They can with a win against the New York Giants Sunday and could even make it despite a loss if the Redskins and/or Vikings lose.

The only chance the Bears have of playing at home on Jan. 1 is if they win the division, which they could only do if Minnesota loses to Detroit Saturday. Then the Redskins would be the Wild Card team. If the Redskins were to beat the Rams in the first round of the playoffs and the Bears beat Dallas, the Redskins would play the Bears in Chicago for the NFC title.

Season ticket holders who wish to retain their tickets for the playoffs must submit payment of $15 or $12, depending on their seat locations, by Friday. After that date, remaining tickets will be sold to the general public.

If the game is not played in Chicago ,refunds will be available by mailing tickets to the Bears, 55 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, 60604.

BEAR PUNTER Bob Parsons had to enter the hospital for observation after Sunday's game and is expected to be out today.

Club trainer Fred Caito said Parsons was kicked in the back during the game and may have suffered an injury to a kidney. Parsons continued to punt after being injured.

Payton probably will continue to return kickoffs Sunday. In his season debut Sunday, Payton broke off one return for 68 yards.

"He (Payton) has volunteered to do it but we'll have to see," Pardee said. "We want someone back there with experience returning kicks and I think Walter can give us that. We considered using Roland (Harper) back there, but he's so important on the wedge we have to use him there."

Sox survive free agent hustle-for now

Bill Veeck may have saved the White Sox by acquiring Ron Blomberg and Bobby Bonds to replace Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble next season. But Veeck may feel like the little boy who saved the town by putting his finger in the dike — it's only a matter of time before things start falling apart.

Veeck was counting on the fact that money to hire baseball's free agents wouldn't be flowing as freely this year as it was last year. But he was wrong. The money isn't flowing, it's gushing, and Veeck believes it's only a matter of time before the high-rolling baseball owners will win out.

"I was wrong, frighteningly so," Veeck said. "I just don't know. I can only hope rationale will set in. But there's nothing I can do to guarantee that."

LAST YEAR three free agents signed contracts calling for about $2 million each. This year, six players already have inked $2 million pacts.

Zisk got a 10-year deal with the Rangers for $3 million and Larry Hisle likewise got $3 million for only six years. Gamble, a part-time player with the Sox, has taken Padres' owner Ray Kroc for a $2.8 million, six-year contract. Rich Gossage will get $2.75 million over the next six years to pitch for the Yankees and former Yankee pitcher Mike Torrez can paper Fenway Park's big green left-field wall with $10 bills if he wants. Torrez will take home $2.5 million for the next seven years to pitch for the Red Sox.

Veeck, like many of his fellow owners who have tried to stay out of the bidding madness, blame several of their free spending counterparts for the money madness, namely Brad Corbett of Texas, George Steinbrenner of New York and Gene Autry of California. But Veeck knows there's nothing he can do to stop them.

"Anything we (owners) could do would be a restraint of trade," Veeck said. "We can only hope they regain their sanity.

"HE (CORBETT) is the reason the bidding has gotten out of hand," one major league executive said. "Right away after the draft he was throwing around figures of $3 million for five years."

Unfortunately, some owners believed they had to play follow-the-leader.

"We felt the circumstances forced us to," said Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers, who snagged Hisle for the magic $3 million price tag. "To have to take a plunge like this every year would be economic suicide."

Veeck wonders if he still can keep coming up with ideas to keep the Sox in the race.

"LAST YEAR we conceived the idea of drafting more ball-players than anyone else and four of the final six we drafted turned out to help us," Veeck said. "This year, we signed a dozen minor league free agents, all of whom we think have a good chance to play in the majors.

"For a year or two maybe, we can come up with ways to equalize the situation. But there will come a time, just as in table-stakes poker, when the preponderance of capital will ultimately win."

One obvious way to restore some sort of normalcy to baseball would be to overhaul the free agent system. Pro football has escaped the lunacy by giving the club losing the free agent a right to match the highest offer for that player's services. If the club does lose the player, the team must be compensated with draft picks.

The round pick is determined by the salary of the player signed but most teams losing a player of star quality are compensated with a first-round pick and more.

"Football had the opportunity to see how baseball blew it," Veeck said. "They saw what baseball did, recognized how stupid it was and decided to do just the opposite, which is what they've done historically."

WHILE VEECK waits for some of his fellow owners to come to their senses, he can take some solace in the fact that the Philadelphia Phillies signed Richie Hebner to a big contract last year then found they needed to draw 2.3 million fans just to break even.

The Phillies didn't sign a free agent of status this year.

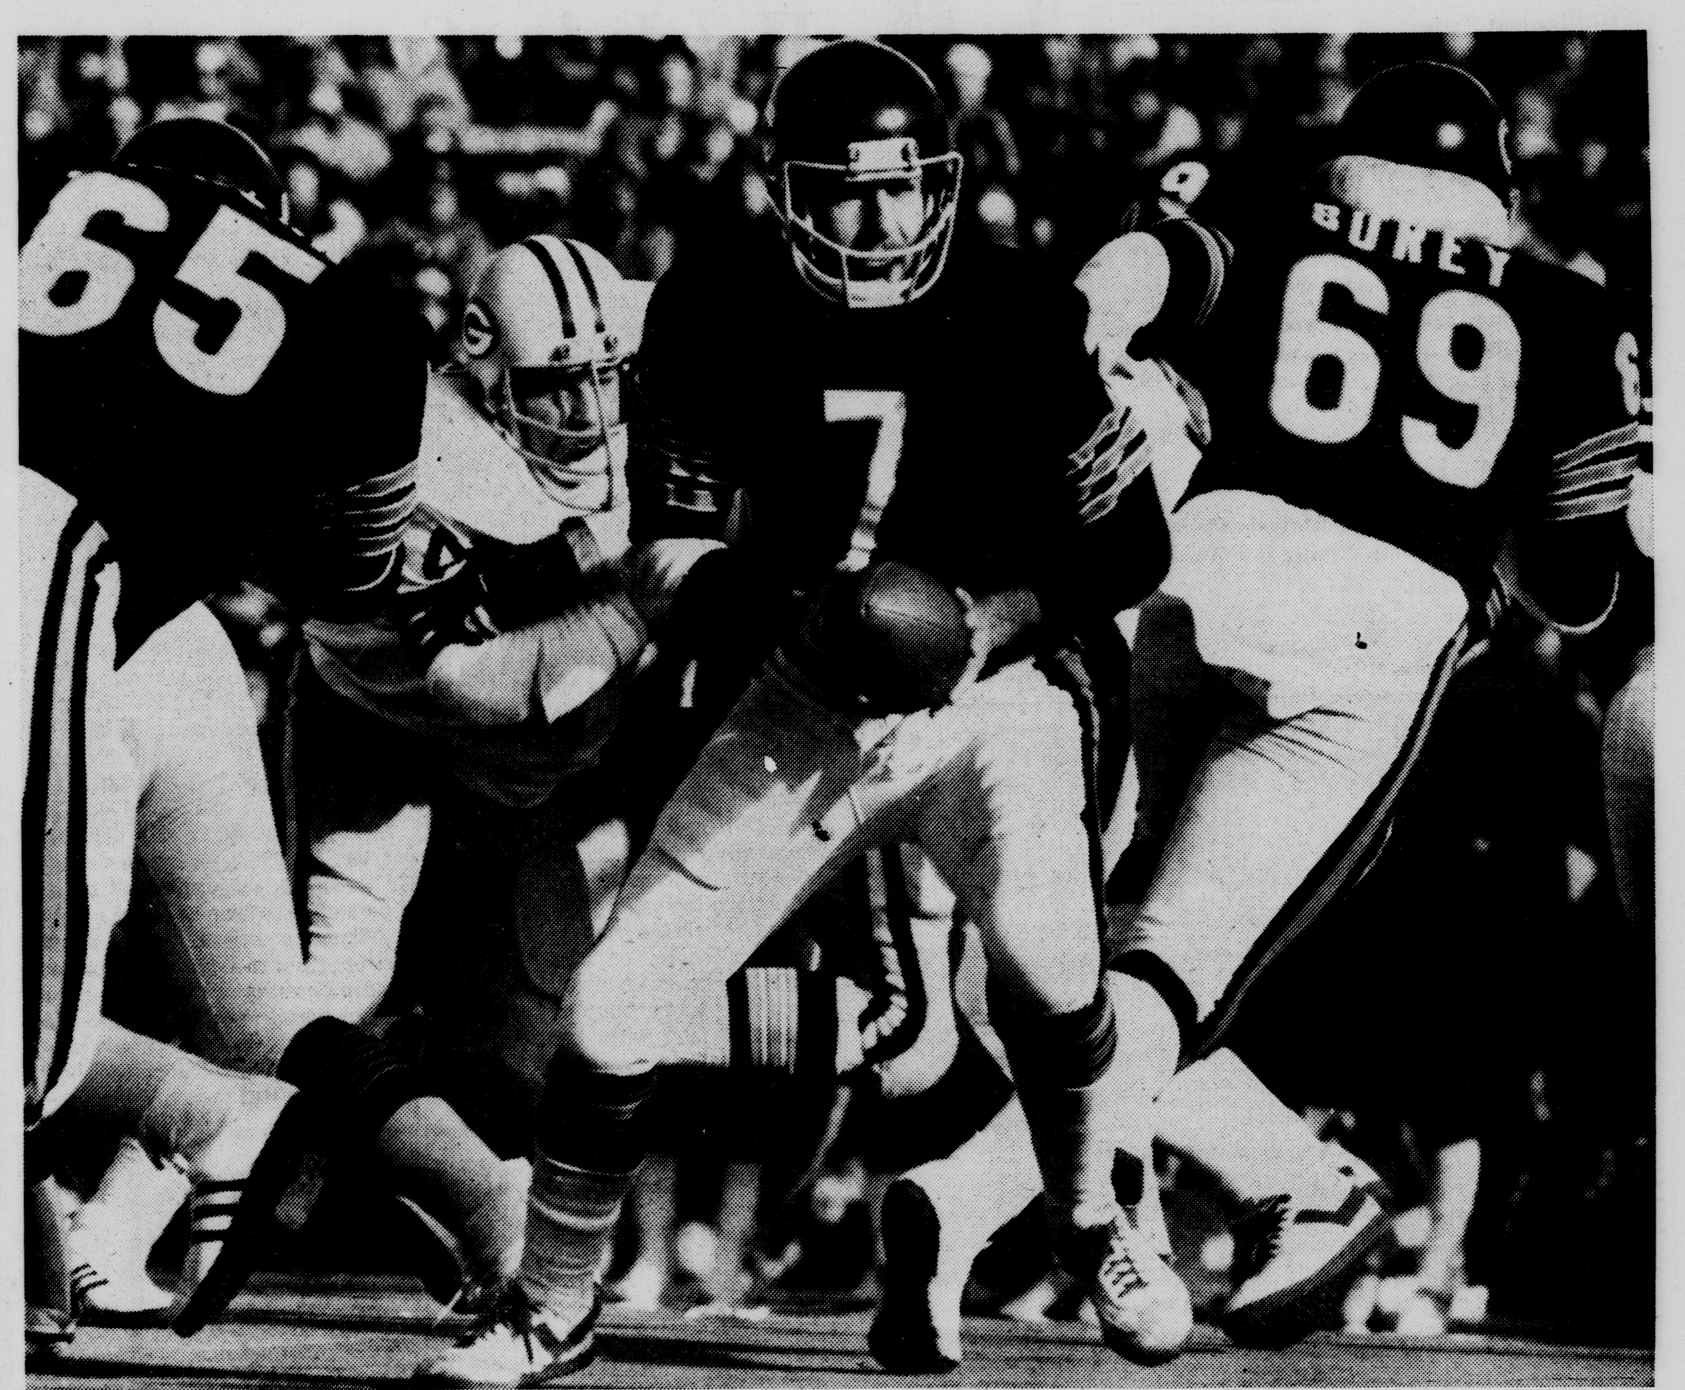
Ray Kroc signed two free agents last year, but just one this time around, Gamble.

"At least he cut the amount in half," Veeck said.

"It's ego trips for some owners I guess. What can you do?"

If you're Bill Veeck, you keep hustling and hoping the millionaires' money will run out and they'll have to give up their hobbies, and that the fans won't someday get tired of the rich teams winning all the time and will stop supporting Veeck. But Veeck doesn't worry about tomorrow — it's too painful anyway.

"Tomorrow never really comes," he said. "By the time tomorrow gets here, it's today."



WHERE'S WALTER? Some critics have charged that Bob Avellini doesn't know that to do with the football until Walter Payton comes along. The Bear quarterback handed off to Payton 32 times and Walter ran for 163 yards Sunday against Green Bay. But Avellini also completed 12 of 20 passes for 114 yards and a touchdown, proving he knows where to put the pigskin, in Bears 21-10 victory.

Sox sell Spencer to Yanks

by BOB GALLAS

The White Sox cleared the way for Lamar Johnson to become a permanent fixture at first base and raised some money to pay Bobby Bonds' salary by selling Jim Spencer to the New York Yankees.

Several minor leaguers also were involved in the deal. Sox owner Bill Veeck refused to disclose the price he got for Spencer, who won a Golden Glove for his fielding in 1977, but it is believed the White Sox got about $250,000.

In the deal, the Sox sent outfielder Tommy Cruz and pitcher Bob Polinsky to the Yankees' Tacoma farm club and in return got pitcher Stan Thomas and Ed Ricks.

IT WAS NO secret the Sox were trying to peddle Spencer in order to give Johnson a chance to play every day. Last week at the winter baseball meetings in Hawaii, they tried to sell Spencer to the Angels for a reported $400,000 but were turned down.

"It hurt me personally to have Jim leave," Veeck said Monday. "He was great to have on the team. but we felt it unfair to Lamar not to play every day. And since we want to be an offensive minded club, we need him in there every day.

Spencer hit .247 with 18 home runs and 69 runs batted in last seeson and is acknowledged as one of the better

fielding first basemen in the business. Johnson hit .302 in 118 games last year, drove in 65 runs and had 18 homers. Johnson has never hit below .300 since he was in Double A baseball and hit best last year when he had an opportunity to play at first. It is hoped he will provide some of the power lost when Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble became free agents and left the team.

Cruz spent only a few weeks with the Sox late in the season after being acquired in a minor league deal, while Polinsky spent 1977 in the minors in Iowa. Oddly enough, Polinsky was acquired by the Sox just before the start of last season, when he came to the Sox from the Yankees in the deal for Bucky Dent.

THOMAS PITCHED with three teams last year, one in the minors. With Seattle, he was 2-6 with a 6.02 earned run average. Acquired by the Yankees, he was sent to Syracuse where he was 2-2 with a 5.09 ERA. He was called up by the Yankees late in the season and was 1-0 with an 8.44 ERA.

Thomas, a righthander, is 28 years old and has a lifetime major league record of 8-8 with a 2.91 ERA. He also has been with Texas and Cleveland.

Ricks, 26, was assigned to the Sox Iowa farm club's roster. He was with three minor league clubs last season and spent the last month of the season with the Yankees, although he did not get into a game.

Staubach brilliant in Dallas triumph

by JOE SARGIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Roger Staubach passed for three touchdowns, scored once himself and set up 14 other points Monday night in leading the playoff-bound Dallas Cowboys to a 42-35 victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

In helping the Cowboys overcome four touchdown passes by the 49ers' Jim Plunkett, Staubach, who had not passed well in his two previous games, was brilliant. Staubach threw 36 yards to Preston Pearson, 20 to Tony Dorsett and 22 to Butch Johnson, running his season total to 17.

In addition, Staubach ran a yard for a touchdown after setting up the drive with a 38-yard pass to Drew Pearson and put the Cowboys in position for two more scores. The 42 points were the most allowed by the 49ers since 1969, a span covering 121 games.

PLUNKETT MORE than matched Staubach, throwing four scoring passes as the 49ers helped put on a good show for the final Monday night telecast of the season.

Plunkett threw scoring passes of 10 yards to Ken Harrison, 27 to Gene Washington, one to Delvin Williams and 47 to Paul Seal. But the effort was wasted as the 49ers suffered their eighth loss in 13 games.

Payton probably will continue to return kickoffs Sunday. In his season debut Sunday, Payton broke off one return for 68 yards.

"He (Payton) has volunteered to do it but we'll have to see," Pardee said. "We want someone back there with experience returning kicks and I think Walter can give us that. We considered using Roland (Harper) back there, but he's so important on the wedge we have to use him there."

WHERE'S WALTER? Some critics have charged that Bob Avellini doesn't know that to do with the football until Walter Payton comes along. The Bear quarterback handed off to Payton 32 times and Walter ran for 163 yards Sunday against Green Bay. But Avellini also completed 12 of 20 passes for 114 yards and a touchdown, proving he knows where to put the pigskin, in Bears 21-10 victory.

Sox survive free agent hustle-for now

Bill Veeck may have saved the White Sox by acquiring Ron Blomberg and Bobby Bonds to replace Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble next season. But Veeck may feel like the little boy who saved the town by putting his finger in the dike — it's only a matter of time before things start falling apart.

Veeck was counting on the fact that money to hire baseball's free agents wouldn't be flowing as freely this year as it was last year. But he was wrong. The money isn't flowing, it's gushing, and Veeck believes it's only a matter of time before the high-rolling baseball owners will win out.

"I was wrong, frighteningly so," Veeck said. "I just don't know. I can only hope rationale will set in. But there's nothing I can do to guarantee that."

LAST YEAR three free agents signed contracts calling for about $2 million each. This year, six players already have inked $2 million pacts.

Zisk got a 10-year deal with the Rangers for $3 million and Larry Hisle likewise got $3 million for only six years. Gamble, a part-time player with the Sox, has taken Padres' owner Ray Kroc for a $2.8 million, six-year contract. Rich Gossage will get $2.75 million over the next six years to pitch for the Yankees and former Yankee pitcher Mike Torrez can paper Fenway Park's big green left-field wall with $10 bills if he wants. Torrez will take home $2.5 million for the next seven years to pitch for the Red Sox.

Veeck, like many of his fellow owners who have tried to stay out of the bidding madness, blame several of their free spending counterparts for the money madness, namely Brad Corbett of Texas, George Steinbrenner of New York and Gene Autry of California. But Veeck knows there's nothing he can do to stop them.

"Anything we (owners) could do would be a restraint of trade," Veeck said. "We can only hope they regain their sanity.

"HE (CORBETT) is the reason the bidding has gotten out of hand," one major league executive said. "Right away after the draft he was throwing around figures of $3 million for five years."

Unfortunately, some owners believed they had to play follow-the-leader.

"We felt the circumstances forced us to," said Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers, who snagged Hisle for the magic $3 million price tag. "To have to take a plunge like this every year would be economic suicide."

Veeck wonders if he still can keep coming up with ideas to keep the Sox in the race.

"LAST YEAR we conceived the idea of drafting more ball-players than anyone else and four of the final six we drafted turned out to help us," Veeck said. "This year, we signed a dozen minor league free agents, all of whom we think have a good chance to play in the majors.

"For a year or two maybe, we can come up with ways to equalize the situation. But there will come a time, just as in table-stakes poker, when the preponderance of capital will ultimately win."

One obvious way to restore some sort of normalcy to baseball would be to overhaul the free agent system. Pro football has escaped the lunacy by giving the club losing the free agent a right to match the highest offer for that player's services. If the club does lose the player, the team must be compensated with draft picks.

The round pick is determined by the salary of the player signed but most teams losing a player of star quality are compensated with a first-round pick and more.

"Football had the opportunity to see how baseball blew it," Veeck said. "They saw what baseball did, recognized how stupid it was and decided to do just the opposite, which is what they've done historically."

WHILE VEECK waits for some of his fellow owners to come to their senses, he can take some solace in the fact that the Philadelphia Phillies signed Richie Hebner to a big contract last year then found they needed to draw 2.3 million fans just to break even.

The Phillies didn't sign a free agent of status this year.

Ray Kroc signed two free agents last year, but just one this time around, Gamble.

"At least he cut the amount in half," Veeck said.

"It's ego trips for some owners I guess. What can you do?"

If you're Bill Veeck, you keep hustling and hoping the millionaires' money will run out and they'll have to give up their hobbies, and that the fans won't someday get tired of the rich teams winning all the time and will stop supporting Veeck. But Veeck doesn't worry about tomorrow — it's too painful anyway.

"Tomorrow never really comes," he said. "By the time tomorrow gets here, it's today."

Sox sell Spencer to Yanks

by BOB GALLAS

The White Sox cleared the way for Lamar Johnson to become a permanent fixture at first base and raised some money to pay Bobby Bonds' salary by selling Jim Spencer to the New York Yankees.

Several minor leaguers also were involved in the deal. Sox owner Bill Veeck refused to disclose the price he got for Spencer, who won a Golden Glove for his fielding in 1977, but it is believed the White Sox got about $250,000.

In the deal, the Sox sent outfielder Tommy Cruz and pitcher Bob Polinsky to the Yankees' Tacoma farm club and in return got pitcher Stan Thomas and Ed Ricks.

IT WAS NO secret the Sox were trying to peddle Spencer in order to give Johnson a chance to play every day. Last week at the winter baseball meetings in Hawaii, they tried to sell Spencer to the Angels for a reported $400,000 but were turned down.

"It hurt me personally to have Jim leave," Veeck said Monday. "He was great to have on the team. but we felt it unfair to Lamar not to play every day. And since we want to be an offensive minded club, we need him in there every day.

Spencer hit .247 with 18 home runs and 69 runs batted in last seeson and is acknowledged as one of the better

fielding first basemen in the business. Johnson hit .302 in 118 games last year, drove in 65 runs and had 18 homers. Johnson has never hit below .300 since he was in Double A baseball and hit best last year when he had an opportunity to play at first. It is hoped he will provide some of the power lost when Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble became free agents and left the team.

Cruz spent only a few weeks with the Sox late in the season after being acquired in a minor league deal, while Polinsky spent 1977 in the minors in Iowa. Oddly enough, Polinsky was acquired by the Sox just before the start of last season, when he came to the Sox from the Yankees in the deal for Bucky Dent.

THOMAS PITCHED with three teams last year, one in the minors. With Seattle, he was 2-6 with a 6.02 earned run average. Acquired by the Yankees, he was sent to Syracuse where he was 2-2 with a 5.09 ERA. He was called up by the Yankees late in the season and was 1-0 with an 8.44 ERA.

Thomas, a righthander, is 28 years old and has a lifetime major league record of 8-8 with a 2.91 ERA. He also has been with Texas and Cleveland.

Ricks, 26, was assigned to the Sox Iowa farm club's roster. He was with three minor league clubs last season and spent the last month of the season with the Yankees, although he did not get into a game.

Staubach brilliant in Dallas triumph

by JOE SARGIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Roger Staubach passed for three touchdowns, scored once himself and set up 14 other points Monday night in leading the playoff-bound Dallas Cowboys to a 42-35 victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

In helping the Cowboys overcome four touchdown passes by the 49ers' Jim Plunkett, Staubach, who had not passed well in his two previous games, was brilliant. Staubach threw 36 yards to Preston Pearson, 20 to Tony Dorsett and 22 to Butch Johnson, running his season total to 17.

In addition, Staubach ran a yard for a touchdown after setting up the drive with a 38-yard pass to Drew Pearson and put the Cowboys in position for two more scores. The 42 points were the most allowed by the 49ers since 1969, a span covering 121 games.

PLUNKETT MORE than matched Staubach, throwing four scoring passes as the 49ers helped put on a good show for the final Monday night telecast of the season.

Plunkett threw scoring passes of 10 yards to Ken Harrison, 27 to Gene Washington, one to Delvin Williams and 47 to Paul Seal. But the effort was wasted as the 49ers suffered their eighth loss in 13 games.

The Cowboys picked up their 11th

King that ran away with Rose Bowl

Jim Murray

The greatest player ever to play in the Rose Bowl was (choose one): (1) Doyle Nave (2) O. J. Simpson (3, Ernie Nevers (4) Any of the Four Horsemen (5) Willie Heston (6) Geroge Wilson (7) Buddy Young.

How about (8) None of the above?

In the opinion of the 50,638 fans who saw him, the greatest player ever to play in the Rose Bowl was a raw kid from Compton nobody ever heard of before the kickoff. He was not in the hunt for the Heisman, not on any All-American teams that year.

He only played about one quarter in the Rose Bowl and ran wild, scoring two touchdowns, gaining 114 yards from scrimmage in only 14 carries for an 8.18 average. They took him out for fear the other team would quit.

WHAT'S THAT, you ask, only 50,638 fans for the Rose Bowl game? Oh, this was not that one on New Year's Day, the one with the hokey parade and all. This was the Junior Rose Bowl game of 1948, and the historic player was Hugh Edward McElhenny.

No one ran with the football with more authority, grace and shifting speed than Hugh McElhenny. They called him the King in the pros. And he ran in a backfield that included Joe (the Jet) Perry and John Henry Johnson and in an era that included Ollie Matson, Jim Brown, Paul Hornung and Lenny Moore.

Hugh McElhenny was playing for Compton Junior College that wintry afternoon in the Rose Bowl in 1948, and his team ran up a 34-0 lead so quickly over a hapless Duluth Junior College visitor that Compton coach Tay Brown practically fielded the Glee Club by the fourth quarter.

With or without the football, Hugh McElhenny was a devastating force on the field. Even standing in assembly out on a flank, he represented the quickest six points in football.

HE NEVER played in the Rose Bowl again, although he was to set the career rushing and scoring records at the University of Washington.

With the San Francisco 49ers, he was part of what was probably the best backfield ever assembled in the NFL — Y.A. Tittle at quarterback, and Perry, Johnson and McElhenny as running backs. Nobody hogged the football in that all-star cast but McElhenny piled up an incredible 1,731 yards in his rookie year, rushing, pass-catching and returning punts and kickoffs. "When he got to running," Gino Marchetti once said, "his legs seemed to grow three feet longer."

McElhenny picked them up so high he seemed airborne in mid-flight. "It was like tackling a coat rack, all those elbows and knees," one safety man grumbled.

He was known in the press as Hustlin' Hugh but in the locker room as Hard Luck Hugh. Recalls McElhenny: "In 1953, I ran for seven touchdowns of 50 yards or more that were called back on penalties." He said, "In that backfield, I never got to carry the ball much more than 10-12 times a game, not 30 or 40 like they do today." He averaged an astonishing 8.0 yards per carry in 1954, and 7.0 in 1952. His career average was 4.9.

McElhenny might conceivably have not wound up in the NFL if it weren't for the Junior Rose Bowl game of 1948.

ALTHOUGH HE was a gifted high school runner who once scored 28 points in 20 minutes in the Coliseum Milk Bowl for George Washington High, he also was the state high school record holder in the high and low hurdles and the broad jump and his father wanted him to try for the Olympics, not the Rose Bowl.

He was also scholastically indifferent, and initially preferred to bum around the United States picking strawberries and cotton and washing cars to keep him in doughnut money rather than aiming for college.

Only after the Junior Rose Bowl did Annapolis, Notre Dame, West Point, USC, Pitt and Washington enter the bidding. Rumors were that Washington won with a high bid of everything west of Puget Sound.

McElhenny was everybody's idea of what an all-pro running back should look like. He had the craggy lined face of a guy who has lived in the back alleys of life, no one to mess with. Charles Bronson gets the part if they make it into a movie.

NOW AN operator of a chain of thrift mart stores in the Peninsula area of San Francisco, McElhenny said, "You know, I don't remember much of that Junior Rose Bowl game in '48. I remember we got two quick touchdowns. Bill Fell ran a kickoff back for a touchdown. I get the impression we only played about 10 minutes of that game."

If so, it probably was the most important 10 minutes of Hugh E. McElhenny's career. The King was born that day.

There'll be another Junior Rose Bowl game in Pasadena Saturday. Presumably it will not be the uneven contest that Compton vs. Duluth was. The first strings probably will get to play most of the game. Presumably, no one will go on to become the King of the NFL. But the press box will be crammed with pro and college scouts just in case. After 30 years the JRB is just about due again.

Hot Lake County team halts Harper, 73-67

The Harper basketball team ran into some hot shooting by Lake County Saturday in a 73-67 loss, lowering the Hawks season record to 5-4.

Lake County shot 60 per cent from the floor in downing the Hawks, who surprised coach Roger Bechtold with a blistering comeback late in the first half.

The Hawks had fallen behind 38-22 with just seven minutes left in the opening half when they outscored Lake County 21-5 in the closing minutes to tie the contest at halftime.

"WE JUST played exceptional basketball at that time," Bechtold said. "We moved the ball well against their zone and started shooting like we're accustomed to."

But the Hawks could make only 10 of 30 shots in the second half, finishing the game with 40 per cent shooting.

"They forced us to shoot more from the outside in the second half," Bechtold said.

Dan Breen paced the Hawks with 26 points followed by Ken Hanks' 14 and Steve Duffy's 12.

victory and clinched the home field advantage for both the first and second round games in the NFC playoffs. They will open post season play against either Minnesota or Chicago.

Dorsett also scored on a 21-yard run and finished the game with 112 yards.

Preston Pearson scored the final Dallas touchdown on a 3-yard run with 2:57 remaining, seemingly locking up the victory, but San Francisco scored 1:25 later when Plunkett connected with Seal.

BOB FERRELL scored on a 1-yard plunge in the first quarter to give the 49ers an early 7-0 lead. But Staubach went to work and before the half was over the Cowboys had a 21-14 lead.

Each side scored once in the third quarter. Staubach passed to Johnson for a 14-point lead in the first minute of the final quarter.

Williams and Seal scored around Preston Pearsnn's second touchdown and the Cowboys ran the clock out to lock up the victory. Williams needed 159 yards to secure his second straight 1,000-yard season, but didn't come close to that total.

King that ran away with Rose Bowl

Jim Murray

The greatest player ever to play in the Rose Bowl was (choose one): (1) Doyle Nave (2) O. J. Simpson (3, Ernie Nevers (4) Any of the Four Horsemen (5) Willie Heston (6) Geroge Wilson (7) Buddy Young.

How about (8) None of the above?

In the opinion of the 50,638 fans who saw him, the greatest player ever to play in the Rose Bowl was a raw kid from Compton nobody ever heard of before the kickoff. He was not in the hunt for the Heisman, not on any All-American teams that year.

He only played about one quarter in the Rose Bowl and ran wild, scoring two touchdowns, gaining 114 yards from scrimmage in only 14 carries for an 8.18 average. They took him out for fear the other team would quit.

WHAT'S THAT, you ask, only 50,638 fans for the Rose Bowl game? Oh, this was not that one on New Year's Day, the one with the hokey parade and all. This was the Junior Rose Bowl game of 1948, and the historic player was Hugh Edward McElhenny.

No one ran with the football with more authority, grace and shifting speed than Hugh McElhenny. They called him the King in the pros. And he ran in a backfield that included Joe (the Jet) Perry and John Henry Johnson and in an era that included Ollie Matson, Jim Brown, Paul Hornung and Lenny Moore.

Hugh McElhenny was playing for Compton Junior College that wintry afternoon in the Rose Bowl in 1948, and his team ran up a 34-0 lead so quickly over a hapless Duluth Junior College visitor that Compton coach Tay Brown practically fielded the Glee Club by the fourth quarter.

With or without the football, Hugh McElhenny was a devastating force on the field. Even standing in assembly out on a flank, he represented the quickest six points in football.

HE NEVER played in the Rose Bowl again, although he was to set the career rushing and scoring records at the University of Washington.

With the San Francisco 49ers, he was part of what was probably the best backfield ever assembled in the NFL — Y.A. Tittle at quarterback, and Perry, Johnson and McElhenny as running backs. Nobody hogged the football in that all-star cast but McElhenny piled up an incredible 1,731 yards in his rookie year, rushing, pass-catching and returning punts and kickoffs. "When he got to running," Gino Marchetti once said, "his legs seemed to grow three feet longer."

McElhenny picked them up so high he seemed airborne in mid-flight. "It was like tackling a coat rack, all those elbows and knees," one safety man grumbled.

He was known in the press as Hustlin' Hugh but in the locker room as Hard Luck Hugh. Recalls McElhenny: "In 1953, I ran for seven touchdowns of 50 yards or more that were called back on penalties." He said, "In that backfield, I never got to carry the ball much more than 10-12 times a game, not 30 or 40 like they do today." He averaged an astonishing 8.0 yards per carry in 1954, and 7.0 in 1952. His career average was 4.9.

McElhenny might conceivably have not wound up in the NFL if it weren't for the Junior Rose Bowl game of 1948.

ALTHOUGH HE was a gifted high school runner who once scored 28 points in 20 minutes in the Coliseum Milk Bowl for George Washington High, he also was the state high school record holder in the high and low hurdles and the broad jump and his father wanted him to try for the Olympics, not the Rose Bowl.

He was also scholastically indifferent, and initially preferred to bum around the United States picking strawberries and cotton and washing cars to keep him in doughnut money rather than aiming for college.

Only after the Junior Rose Bowl did Annapolis, Notre Dame, West Point, USC, Pitt and Washington enter the bidding. Rumors were that Washington won with a high bid of everything west of Puget Sound.

McElhenny was everybody's idea of what an all-pro running back should look like. He had the craggy lined face of a guy who has lived in the back alleys of life, no one to mess with. Charles Bronson gets the part if they make it into a movie.

NOW AN operator of a chain of thrift mart stores in the Peninsula area of San Francisco, McElhenny said, "You know, I don't remember much of that Junior Rose Bowl game in '48. I remember we got two quick touchdowns. Bill Fell ran a kickoff back for a touchdown. I get the impression we only played about 10 minutes of that game."

If so, it probably was the most important 10 minutes of Hugh E. McElhenny's career. The King was born that day.

There'll be another Junior Rose Bowl game in Pasadena Saturday. Presumably it will not be the uneven contest that Compton vs. Duluth was. The first strings probably will get to play most of the game. Presumably, no one will go on to become the King of the NFL. But the press box will be crammed with pro and college scouts just in case. After 30 years the JRB is just about due again.

Hot Lake County team halts Harper, 73-67

The Harper basketball team ran into some hot shooting by Lake County Saturday in a 73-67 loss, lowering the Hawks season record to 5-4.

Lake County shot 60 per cent from the floor in downing the Hawks, who surprised coach Roger Bechtold with a blistering comeback late in the first half.

The Hawks had fallen behind 38-22 with just seven minutes left in the opening half when they outscored Lake County 21-5 in the closing minutes to tie the contest at halftime.

"WE JUST played exceptional basketball at that time," Bechtold said. "We moved the ball well against their zone and started shooting like we're accustomed to."

But the Hawks could make only 10 of 30 shots in the second half, finishing the game with 40 per cent shooting.

"They forced us to shoot more from the outside in the second half," Bechtold said.

Dan Breen paced the Hawks with 26 points followed by Ken Hanks' 14 and Steve Duffy's 12.

victory and clinched the home field advantage for both the first and second round games in the NFC playoffs. They will open post season play against either Minnesota or Chicago.

Dorsett also scored on a 21-yard run and finished the game with 112 yards.

Preston Pearson scored the final Dallas touchdown on a 3-yard run with 2:57 remaining, seemingly locking up the victory, but San Francisco scored 1:25 later when Plunkett connected with Seal.

BOB FERRELL scored on a 1-yard plunge in the first quarter to give the 49ers an early 7-0 lead. But Staubach went to work and before the half was over the Cowboys had a 21-14 lead.

Each side scored once in the third quarter. Staubach passed to Johnson for a 14-point lead in the first minute of the final quarter.

Williams and Seal scored around Preston Pearsnn's second touchdown and the Cowboys ran the clock out to lock up the victory. Williams needed 159 yards to secure his second straight 1,000-yard season, but didn't come close to that total.

CHIN UP. Scott Santoro of Palatine has little choice about chin movement while trying to pin down Ed Broderick of Rolling Meadows during a dual meet on the Pirate mats Saturday. The 185-pound junior was unable to stick his Mustang foe but did forge a 13-3 victory to help his team win, 31-13.

Arlington, Buffalo Grove clash tonight

by ART MUGALIAN

The addition of Barrington to the Mid-Suburban North has provided a new dimension to the basketball race, but sometimes the old dimensions are just as interesting.

For instance, tonight's Buffalo Grove at Arlington game will be a renewal of a hard-fought series that invariably draws a full house of basketball loonies.

As an extra bonus for cage fans who manage to squeeze into Arlington's Grace Gym, the first meeting of the season between the Bison and the Cardinals is also an early struggle for first place in the MSL North. Both teams are 2-0 in division play with, of course, 10 more games to play in a long season.

BUT, DESPITE the excitement over Barrington's arrival into the league, some observers are already predicting that it will be Arlington and Buffalo Grove fighting for North honors come February.

Buffalo Grove, led by 6-foot-9 junior center Chris Molenaur and 6-foot-3 take-charge guard Fred Kruse, has already knocked off preseason favorite Barrington, 67-59, last Friday. Overall, the Bison of coach Paul Grady are 6-1, their only defeat coming at the hands of old nemesis New Trier West.

Arlington's MSL victories have been over Wheeling (by one point) and Hersey (by 31). The Cards have a 6-foot-9 center of their own, Shawn Donahue, plus a guard who can contend with Kruse, 6-foot-1 junior Chris DeSimone.

Barrington (1-1) will try to get back into the race when the Broncos host Palatine (0-1) tonight. Barrington played its best game of the year against Buffalo Grove, but lost for the first time anyway.

PALATINE WILL try to bounce back from a pair of defeats at the hands of Fremd and St. Viator.

In the remaining North division contest on tonight's slate, Hersey (0-1) hosts Wheeling (0-2) in what could turn into a shootout between Huskie Jim Thomas and Wildcat Steve Majkowski. Fremd (1-1) faces visiting Rolling Meadows in a crossover clash.

Three South Division teams remain unbeaten after two weeks of action although Elk Grove and Schaumburg have played just one game each. The Grens and Saxons share the early South lead with Forest View. The Falcons are 2-0 and visit winless (0-2) Hoffman Estates tonight.

Forest View's fortunes ride with four returning lettermen, including 6-foot-6 center Bob Cameron who missed the second half of last season's when he ripped up his knee. Two other veterans from last year's team are sharpshooters Jeff Martinski and Rick Gardner. Don Wiora, a top sub from a year ago, is also back to help first-year coach Glen Elms.

HOFFMAN, MEANWHILE, will be trying for its first South victory without the help of senior veteran and team leader Doug Oslance, who broke his thumb last week. Oslance played in Friday's loss to Conant but that was before he had X-rays. He'll be out for approximately three weeks.

Schaumburg travels to Prospect (1-1) on the heels of the Saxons' big 51-45 victory over preseason favorite Rolling Meadows last Friday. Schaumburg is benefiting from the sudden emergence of Kent Payne as a playmaker and 6-foot-2 George Tuzil in the role of vacuum cleaner under the backboards.

Prospect, with 6-foot-2 sniper Jim Apuzzo diubtful because of an ankle injury has a lot of beef up front with 6-foot-3 Paul Izban, 6-foot-2 Dave LaCosse and 6-foot-1 Paul Lundstedt. They'll have to contend with Schaumburg's 6-foot-7 high scorer, John Chmiel, who is averaging 23 points a game.

Elk Grove's battle with Conant (1-1) should be another in a long series of low-scoring affairs, thanks to the skin-tight zones played by both teams.

Van Lier still part of Bulls plan

Don Friske

Byline report

Just when it seemed like Norm Van Lier was headed for new surroundings, the spark-plug guard turned in a couple of performances that prolonged his career with the Bulls.

At least for now.

Coach Ed Badger praised his veteran guard after the Bulls extended their winning streak to five games last weekend with victories over the New Jersey Nets and the San Antonio Spurs.

BUT THAT STILL might not be enough to restore Badger's faith in the controversial Bull who always seems to speak his mind. And anybody knows what kind of trouble that can create.

Apparently, Badger attempted to trade the 30-year-old playmaker to the Kansas City Kings about 10 days ago. At the time, Van Lier was in the midst of a depression-filled week, brought on, he said, by too much playing time.

When he first left the lineup, it was announced than Van Lier was suffering from the flu, but he eventually said there was no substance to that explanation. He was tired, plain and simple, and he decided to sit out three games to regain his strength.

This bothered Badger, who said he would do anything necessary to keep harmony among the players. He does not want such problems to interrupt the Bulls' quest for the league title this season.

AFTER THE 104-78 victory over the Nets last Thursday night, Badger said he would not trade Van Lier, who had sparked the Bulls on both ends of the floor with his aggressive style.

Van Lier countered Badger's statement by saying he would not worry about the trade rumors that were circulating and that he just would continue to play the only type of basketball he knew — rough-and-tumbling, dive-for-the-loose-ball, go-for-broke basketball.

The Bulls are starting to roll along now at the same pace that won them a spot in the playoffs last season. Badger's concern about bad feelings between players should not be overlooked. It would be a shame if disharmony affected the Bulls' game performance.

But it probably would be a big mistake to replace Van Lier with another National Basketball Assn. guard via a trade.

FOR ONE THING, Van Lier is a big reason for the offensive and defensive balance that is winning games for the Bulls right now. He knows the system of offensive patterns, and a change in personnel might prove costly.

Currently, the Bulls are trying to overtake the Denver Nuggets for first place in the Midwest Division. The Nuggets will bring a two-game lead to the stadium tonight. Without Van Lier's experience in the lineup, the younger Bulls would have trouble competing with the better teams in the league.

Van Lier's ability to find the open man is probably his biggest strength. Although he missed three games, he still has the team leadership in assists with 153, almost twice as many as anybody else on the team.

John Mengelt provided a steady replacement for the Bulls during Van Lier's absence, but things just seem to move a little smoother with the veteran on the floor.

BADGER VOWED he would do everything he could to give Van Lier the rest he needs.

The veterans's complaints were made known long before the season started.

He said he was upset with the Bulls front office (including Badger) when it failed to draft or acquire a big guard during the off-season. Van Lier said this action showed him he would be in for another rough reason of covering the top guards in the league night after night.

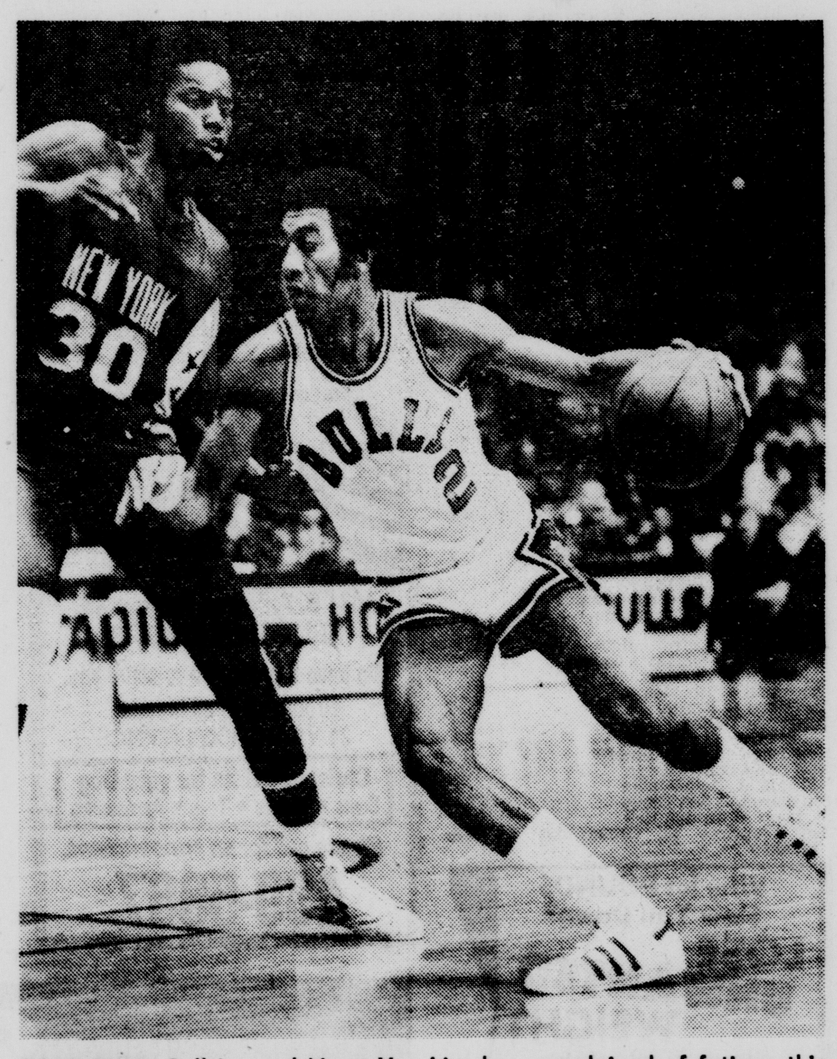
Against San Antonio, Van Lier showed he still could handle that sort of pressure. All-star George Gervin was his man in the one-on-one confrontations. Van Lier managed to collect a team-high 14 assists, but his presence on the floor provided something that could not be measured in box-score numbers.

Late in the game, with the Bulls trailing by three points, Van Lier got right behind Gervin as the big guard tried to drive up the lane to put the game away.

BULLS FORWARD Mickey Johnson swiped the ball from Gervin, who was all caught up with Van Lier's defense. Johnson scored on a breakaway stuff.

Just seconds laster, the Spurs missed a shot and the ball went rolling on the floor, attracting all the attention. The scrappy Van Lier came up with the loose ball, weaving his way through the mass of bodies and cleared it up to Wilbur Holland. The Bulls scored the basket and were in command to stay.

Those are the small things that makes Van Lier a valuable part of the Bulls attack. Eliminate those two plays and the Bulls would be seeking to start another winning streak instead of trying to extend their current string to six games tonight.



VALU-BULL. Bulls' guard Norm Van Lier has complained of fatigue this year, and this has bothered coach Ed Badger. When Van Lier sat out three games, rumors surfaced that the veteran might be traded. That might be a mistake because of Van Lier's aggressive play and pinpoint passing, two things that have helped make the Bulls a playoff contender once again.

Hawks' Russell sidelined for fight

The Black Hawks will not get to use the services of defenseman Phil Russell for the next three games. He was suspended Monday as the result of a brawl with Mike Walton of Vancouver Dec. 4.

The suspension means the Hawks' top scoring defenseman will not skate against the New York Islanders tonight, the New York Rangers Wednesday and the Atlanta Flames Saturday.

While not putting the Hawks into a desperate situation — they have been carrying an extra defenseman all season — it does take some of the glow away from the team following Sunday's 8-3 laugher over the Minnesota North Stars.

NATIONAL HOCKEY League Executive Vice-Pres. Brian O'Neill handed down the penalty after conducting a hearing Monday with both players present, along with game and team officials and NHL referee supervisor Frank Udvari.

At the time of the incident both players received match penalties and automatic $200 fines for deliberate attempts to injure. Walton also was fined an extra $50 for spearing.

"This conduct cannot be tolerated," O'Neill said, "and I will continue to deal severely with incidents of this kind."

Dave Logan, who watched Sunday's victory from the press box, probably will fill Russell's spot until he can suit up for Sunday's encounter against the Atlanta Flames in Chicago.

RUSSELL AND Walton went after each other with their sticks near the end of Vancouver's 6-2 victory over the Hawks in Chicago Dec. 4. Neither was injured as a result of the brawl.

The rest of the Hawks still are enjoying the memories of Sunday's victory, which represents their biggest goal production of the season.

"We finally put it together," Hawks coach Bob Pulford said afterward. "I think that was our best hockey of the year.

"Stan Mikita's goal at 19 seconds ignited the team," he said. "We played about as well as we could early in the game, let down a bit in the middle, but we finished strong."

The victory was only the Hawks third in the last 16 games, but it pushed them back into a tie with Vancouver for the Conn Smythe lead. Today the Hawks skate in New York against the Islanders before returning home against the Rangers Wednesday.

CHIN UP. Scott Santoro of Palatine has little choice about chin movement while trying to pin down Ed Broderick of Rolling Meadows during a dual meet on the Pirate mats Saturday. The 185-pound junior was unable to stick his Mustang foe but did forge a 13-3 victory to help his team win, 31-13.

Arlington, Buffalo Grove clash tonight

by ART MUGALIAN

The addition of Barrington to the Mid-Suburban North has provided a new dimension to the basketball race, but sometimes the old dimensions are just as interesting.

For instance, tonight's Buffalo Grove at Arlington game will be a renewal of a hard-fought series that invariably draws a full house of basketball loonies.

As an extra bonus for cage fans who manage to squeeze into Arlington's Grace Gym, the first meeting of the season between the Bison and the Cardinals is also an early struggle for first place in the MSL North. Both teams are 2-0 in division play with, of course, 10 more games to play in a long season.

BUT, DESPITE the excitement over Barrington's arrival into the league, some observers are already predicting that it will be Arlington and Buffalo Grove fighting for North honors come February.

Buffalo Grove, led by 6-foot-9 junior center Chris Molenaur and 6-foot-3 take-charge guard Fred Kruse, has already knocked off preseason favorite Barrington, 67-59, last Friday. Overall, the Bison of coach Paul Grady are 6-1, their only defeat coming at the hands of old nemesis New Trier West.

Arlington's MSL victories have been over Wheeling (by one point) and Hersey (by 31). The Cards have a 6-foot-9 center of their own, Shawn Donahue, plus a guard who can contend with Kruse, 6-foot-1 junior Chris DeSimone.

Barrington (1-1) will try to get back into the race when the Broncos host Palatine (0-1) tonight. Barrington played its best game of the year against Buffalo Grove, but lost for the first time anyway.

PALATINE WILL try to bounce back from a pair of defeats at the hands of Fremd and St. Viator.

In the remaining North division contest on tonight's slate, Hersey (0-1) hosts Wheeling (0-2) in what could turn into a shootout between Huskie Jim Thomas and Wildcat Steve Majkowski. Fremd (1-1) faces visiting Rolling Meadows in a crossover clash.

Three South Division teams remain unbeaten after two weeks of action although Elk Grove and Schaumburg have played just one game each. The Grens and Saxons share the early South lead with Forest View. The Falcons are 2-0 and visit winless (0-2) Hoffman Estates tonight.

Forest View's fortunes ride with four returning lettermen, including 6-foot-6 center Bob Cameron who missed the second half of last season's when he ripped up his knee. Two other veterans from last year's team are sharpshooters Jeff Martinski and Rick Gardner. Don Wiora, a top sub from a year ago, is also back to help first-year coach Glen Elms.

HOFFMAN, MEANWHILE, will be trying for its first South victory without the help of senior veteran and team leader Doug Oslance, who broke his thumb last week. Oslance played in Friday's loss to Conant but that was before he had X-rays. He'll be out for approximately three weeks.

Schaumburg travels to Prospect (1-1) on the heels of the Saxons' big 51-45 victory over preseason favorite Rolling Meadows last Friday. Schaumburg is benefiting from the sudden emergence of Kent Payne as a playmaker and 6-foot-2 George Tuzil in the role of vacuum cleaner under the backboards.

Prospect, with 6-foot-2 sniper Jim Apuzzo diubtful because of an ankle injury has a lot of beef up front with 6-foot-3 Paul Izban, 6-foot-2 Dave LaCosse and 6-foot-1 Paul Lundstedt. They'll have to contend with Schaumburg's 6-foot-7 high scorer, John Chmiel, who is averaging 23 points a game.

Elk Grove's battle with Conant (1-1) should be another in a long series of low-scoring affairs, thanks to the skin-tight zones played by both teams.

Dorsett's run, which went to the five-yard line, set up Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach's one-yard, second quarter touchdown tally. Dallas won 42-35.

Washington dealt suspension, fine

NEW YORK — Los Angeles Laker forward Kermit Washington Monday was fined a league-maxium $10,000 and suspended for at least 60 days by National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien for punching Houston's Rudy Tomjanovich last week. Washington may apply for readmission at the end of the 60-day period but the suspension could be extended for the rest of the season.

The suspension is the longest ever in NBA history and the fine is the largest permissible under NBA rules. O'Brien fined Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, also of Los Angeles, $5,000 earlier this season for punching Milwaukee rookie Kent Benson.

The 6-foot-8, 230-pound Washington will miss at least 26 games. He will not be paid and is prohibited from taking part in any team activity. Meanwhile, Tomjanovich, 6-8 and 220 pounds, remains in intensive care at Centralia Hospital in Inglewood, Calif., with a broken nose and jaw.

Coryell upset despite improvements

ST. LOUIS — An angry outburst at club management and booing football fans has netted St. Louis Cardinal Coach Don Coryell assurances of job security and better stadium seats for his family. Nevertheless, Coryell said "I'm still very disappointed and upset."

In a 40-minute meeting Monday with owner Bill Bidwill, the two men agreed Coryell would remain with the club, at least through the season finale Sunday against Tampa Bay. Coryell has three years remaining on his contract. "He is the Cardinal head coach," Bidwill said. "I expect him to be in that capacity next year."

Coryell's major compaint was that neither he nor his assistant coaches have any say in the drafting of college players. Despite a desperate need for defensive help, the Cardinals this year drafted a quarterback and a running back in the first two rounds.

Blues trade ex-Hawk Redmond

Myre last season finished with a 17-17-7 record with the Flames. Gibbs is an eight-year veteran of the NHL. Bennett had his highest scoring season in 1975-76 when he tallied 34 goals and 31 assists. All three men are 29.

McMillan had seven goals and 12 assists in 28 games for the Blues this season. Belanger played three games for the Blues before he was sent to the team's Salt Lake City farm club Nov. 1.

Remond had four goals and 11 assists in 28 games. The Black Hawks sent Redmond, who played for Chicago from 1972 through last season, to St. Louis for winger Pierre Plante during the off season.

Kentucky extends victory streak

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Senior forward Rick Robey keyed a Kentucky scoring spurt midway through the second half to lead the top-ranked Wildcats to an 84-65 victory over stubborn South Carolina Monday night.

Robey, who led all scorers with 19 points, helped the Wildcats, now 4-0, to outscore the Gamecocks, 18-6, after South Carolina had trailed 45-42, with 15 minutes remaining. South Carolina, after trailing 63-48, closed to within 10 points in the final minutes, but could not overtake the Wildcats.

Jack Givens and sophomore guard Kyle Macy contributed 18 points apiece. Sophomore guard Mike Doyle, who scored only two points in the first half, led South Carolina, now 3-3, with 16 points.

In other collegiate basketball action Monday night, it was Cincinnati 73, Eastern Kentucky 58; Rutgers 78, Davidson 77; and Detroit 94, St. Bonaventure 92.

Washington dealt suspension, fine

NEW YORK — Los Angeles Laker forward Kermit Washington Monday was fined a league-maxium $10,000 and suspended for at least 60 days by National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien for punching Houston's Rudy Tomjanovich last week. Washington may apply for readmission at the end of the 60-day period but the suspension could be extended for the rest of the season.

The suspension is the longest ever in NBA history and the fine is the largest permissible under NBA rules. O'Brien fined Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, also of Los Angeles, $5,000 earlier this season for punching Milwaukee rookie Kent Benson.

The 6-foot-8, 230-pound Washington will miss at least 26 games. He will not be paid and is prohibited from taking part in any team activity. Meanwhile, Tomjanovich, 6-8 and 220 pounds, remains in intensive care at Centralia Hospital in Inglewood, Calif., with a broken nose and jaw.

Coryell upset despite improvements

ST. LOUIS — An angry outburst at club management and booing football fans has netted St. Louis Cardinal Coach Don Coryell assurances of job security and better stadium seats for his family. Nevertheless, Coryell said "I'm still very disappointed and upset."

In a 40-minute meeting Monday with owner Bill Bidwill, the two men agreed Coryell would remain with the club, at least through the season finale Sunday against Tampa Bay. Coryell has three years remaining on his contract. "He is the Cardinal head coach," Bidwill said. "I expect him to be in that capacity next year."

Coryell's major compaint was that neither he nor his assistant coaches have any say in the drafting of college players. Despite a desperate need for defensive help, the Cardinals this year drafted a quarterback and a running back in the first two rounds.

Myre last season finished with a 17-17-7 record with the Flames. Gibbs is an eight-year veteran of the NHL. Bennett had his highest scoring season in 1975-76 when he tallied 34 goals and 31 assists. All three men are 29.

McMillan had seven goals and 12 assists in 28 games for the Blues this season. Belanger played three games for the Blues before he was sent to the team's Salt Lake City farm club Nov. 1.

Remond had four goals and 11 assists in 28 games. The Black Hawks sent Redmond, who played for Chicago from 1972 through last season, to St. Louis for winger Pierre Plante during the off season.

Kentucky extends victory streak

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Senior forward Rick Robey keyed a Kentucky scoring spurt midway through the second half to lead the top-ranked Wildcats to an 84-65 victory over stubborn South Carolina Monday night.

Robey, who led all scorers with 19 points, helped the Wildcats, now 4-0, to outscore the Gamecocks, 18-6, after South Carolina had trailed 45-42, with 15 minutes remaining. South Carolina, after trailing 63-48, closed to within 10 points in the final minutes, but could not overtake the Wildcats.

Jack Givens and sophomore guard Kyle Macy contributed 18 points apiece. Sophomore guard Mike Doyle, who scored only two points in the first half, led South Carolina, now 3-3, with 16 points.

In other collegiate basketball action Monday night, it was Cincinnati 73, Eastern Kentucky 58; Rutgers 78, Davidson 77; and Detroit 94, St. Bonaventure 92.
